B.C. to Pay Lion's Share For Pollution

'Plan Depends on Ottawa Supplying Low-Cost Funds'

By PETE LOUDON

Premier Bennett today promised the province will soon assume "the lion's share" of municipal pollution control costs throughout British Columbia.

Speaking by telephone from his home at Kelowna, he said the share-cost financing scheme would be introduced at the next session of the legislature. Its success, however, would be dependent on obtaining low-cost federal funds.

At the same time, the premier skirted the question of whether a full-scale technical study, independent of cabinet, would be ordered to determine whether sea dumping of sewage requires treatment centres.

"I'm not dealing with that," he said in response to the question.

He hinted however that Forestry Minister Ray Williston, who has indicated he supports raw sewage sea disposal may have more influence on any cabinet decision than Health Minister Ralph Loftmark, who favors use of sewage treatment plants, before sewage reaches the sea.

'Cabinet Will Make Decision'

The decision will be made by cabinet in consultation with engineers, the Pollution Control Board and other experts, and the cabinet "will speak with one voice," said the premier.

Then he added, "We will especially listen to the minister who is responsible for the pollution control board, Mr. Williston."

The premier said financing of pollution control would probably work on a sliding scale similar to school financing. He said all details have not been worked out.

"But basically we will have a basic mill rate which all municipalities will be able to afford."

'Lower Than Market Rates'

Premier Bennett said Ottawa should participate because the federal government gets 80 per cent of taxes paid by B.C. companies and 74 per cent of the provincial personal income tax.

"They should share in the costs by supplying municipalities with capital at lower than market rates."

He said pollution control will be the most important topic at future federal-provincial conferences. The provincial government has not previously sought federal aid because it has been setting up its own controls and boards for the past two years, he added.

The premier's announcement followed by a few hours a demand from Opposition Leader Robert Strachan that the pro-

PM Takes Cultural Holiday

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau will transfer his office to a railway car for the next three days as he soaks up culture at the Stratford festival.

The Prime Minister is scheduled to fly to London, Ont., by government jetstar tonight and then proceed to Stratford where he will live and work in two railway cars until Sunday morning.

He will be accompanied by three close friends, Regional Development Minister Jean Marchand, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier and Chief Policy Advisor Marc Lalonde.

Tonight Mr. Trudeau will attend a performance of Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet at the Stratford festival theatre.

Friday night he will see Chekov's The Seagull and then be guest of honor at a reception given by the actors and members of the festival committee.

After a reception given Saturday by local Stratford Liberals, the Prime Minister will wind up his theatre weekend at a performance of Moliere's Tartuffe.

The jetstar will stand by in London throughout in case Mr. Trudeau must return to Ottawa quickly before Sunday.

We'll have meetings with the federal government to obtain low interest rates.

"We will suggest the federal government make money available to municipalities at subsidized interest rates."

He said the main point is that municipalities may now proceed with planning, knowing that aid is forthcoming. Health is a "number one problem," said the premier and must be regarded as such.

Nixon Picks Agnew For Running Mate

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Former vice-president Richard Nixon early today won the Republican party's presidential nomination on the first ballot and 10 hours later announced that Maryland Governor Spiro Agnew is his choice as vice-presidential running mate.

Agnew, 49, will be nominated formally later today at the Republican convention. Balloting will follow. The presidential nominee's choice of running mate is virtually certain of acceptance.

Agnew once was a supporter of New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller, defeated by Nixon for the presidential nomination. But he switched to Nixon and nominated the former vice-president at the convention here Wednesday night.

NOT INTERESTED
Governors Reagan and Rockefeller both had said they were not interested in being vice-president.

Nixon was under heavy pressure from the divergent wings of the Republican party in making his choice.

The South, where third-party candidate George Wallace is expected to win a lot of votes, did not want the vice-presidential choice to be a man of extremely liberal hue.

Delegates from major urban areas, on the other hand, wanted a vice-presidential candidate with progressive views.

Labor Advocates Higher Mail Rate To Meet Pay Hike

Distributors of second and third class mail are "squeezing the lemon" of the public and not paying their fair share, the Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night.

"Some new guy back there in Ottawa said something about the lemon being squeezed," said Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labor, in reference to a comment by Prime Minister Trudeau on the postal strike.

"If everyone paid their fair share for mail service they could pay for the wage increase. The post office is losing millions on second and third class junk mail."

(Second and third class mail includes advertising, magazines and newspapers).

Criticizes Press

Mr. Haynes also criticized newspaper editorials which said the government shouldn't allow essential services the right to strike, and that the editorials and chambers of commerce said the legal right to strike given to federal civil servants last year was a mistake and should be taken away.

"You sure as hell would never know they are essential if you look at wages," he said, referring to hospitals and other areas which are usually considered essential services.

"They have the lowest wages and the lousiest working conditions."

He warned that the Bill 33 legislation in British Columbia gives the cabinet the right to step into the private sector and order an end to strikes deemed against the public interest and welfare.

One section of the law allowed the cabinet the right to send

John D Gets Double Kiss With Blushes

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — A blushing John Diefenbaker received the prime ministerial treatment, 1968 style, at the opening parade of the annual Prince Albert Fair Wednesday.

After riding in the lead car of the parade, the former prime minister had just pulled to the roadside to watch the rest of the procession when he was spotted by a two-girl comedy act from nearby Kinston.

The two girls broke ranks, stormed up to Mr. Diefenbaker and kissed him soundly. Eyewitnesses said the 72-year-old chief looked "pleasantly upset."

Hit Run Drivers Get Heavy Fines

Two persons were fined a total of $250 Wednesday on charges of failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Court was told James McClelland, 3914 Stamboul, struck a parked car on Hillside, July 7. He was fined $150.

Marilyn White, 2127 Vancouver, was fined $100 after court heard she hit a parked car on Government Street, June 8.

Thermopylae Club Revives Sea Romance

To celebrate Victoria's historic period as home port to one of the "fastest sailing ships afloat" the Thermopylae Club is planning six days of festivities.

The club, named after the clipper ship, has planned events from August 15 to 20 to commemorate the launching of the Thermopylae on August 19, 1868 in Aberdeen, Scotland.

The maverick clipper ship was the only full-rigged sailing vessel ever to call Victoria "home port." The ship, here from 1891 to 1895, was in a class with the Cutty Sark.

The Thermopylae Club is interested in keeping alive sea traditions. Members feel that Victorians forget that their city is a port and take for granted the magic and romance of the sea.

DISPLAY SEA RELICS

On August 15 at 10 a.m. the club will officially open a display of sea relics on the third floor of the Maritime Museum. The objects on display are from private collections, separate from the museum's own collection.

The display will be open to the public until August 20.

On August 17 from 10:20 to 10:45 a.m. there will be a carton of sea chanteys. At 11 a.m. on the causeway opposite the Empress Hotel, the Thermopylae plaque will be gilded and some old mariners interviewed.

The mariners will then proceed to the Empress Hotel for a coffee party.

A special service for "old salts" will be held on the 18th at the St. Dunstan's Anglican Church in Gordon Head. The 11 a.m. service will be conducted by Archdeacon A. E. Hendy, who served in the North Atlantic during the Second World War.

The service will be followed by a picnic for club-members and anyone with an interest in the sea.

Specific restaurants in the city will be offering a special Thermopylae menu during the week and bars are working on a "Thermopylae," a rum drink for sailors.

The club is hoping to make Thermopylae a city-wide festivity.

... NIXON

Nixon for president capped a remarkable political comeback. Nixon won as expected on the first ballot.

He immediately pledged a campaign for the Nov. 5 election "in a way to unite the nation."

The problems at home and abroad are simply too big for politics as usual or for partisanship as usual," the 55-year-old lawyer said.

His long-predicted triumph as the favorite of the party's hierarchy and professional rank-and-file came in a marathon nomination session lasting nearly nine hours.

Nixon was 692 of the 1,333 official delegates votes—or 25 more than he needed—in a one-sided race with Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, a non-winner in the last three Republican contests, and Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, the former cowboy movie star who captured the hearts of the Republican right wing.

TO NAME FOR

The Democratic party meeting in Chicago later this month will name Nixon's opponent. Vice-president Hubert Humphrey is the favorite over Senator Eugene McCarthy.

Former Alabama governor George Wallace, a segregationist, is a strong third-party candidate this year as well.

The final result, close to most pre-convention forecasts, showed Rockefeller with 277 votes and Reagan with 182.

A clutch of "favorite son" candidates—state leaders competing to exercise maximum influence on party policy or for goodwill gestures by regional supporters—accounted for the rest.

They also accounted for a long, boring night of speeches and demonstrations begun at 5 p.m. EDT and finally ended near 2 a.m. today although the final state-by-state roll call for a presidential nominee took little more than a half-hour.

After Nixon's election, most delegations moved to make the choice unanimous, a formality.

ACCEPTS TONIGHT

Nixon will deliver his acceptance speech tonight.

Nixon said he would announce Saturday whether he will fly to Moscow soon for talks there with Soviet leaders.

He told reporters Tuesday there was the possibility of such a trip, but it had not yet been definitely arranged.

If he goes, Nixon said it would be between now and the opening of the Democratic convention Aug. 26.

Nixon was nominated in a surge of optimism that this will be a year of triumph for the Republicans who have occupied the White House in only eight of the last 35 years.

BELIEVE CAN WIN

There was obviously a strong belief among the delegates to the convention that Nixon could go on to defeat Humphrey.

Nixon and his supporters are hoping to benefit from the liberal criticism of the present Democratic administration for its conduct of the Vietnam war and the general air of disquiet about domestic affairs.

The party, in choosing Nixon, rejected the contention that he was a "loser" and that to win a majority in November the Republicans needed a liberal such as Rockefeller.

Nine Coal Miners Killed

By Accidental Explosion

GREENVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Rescue workers began the slow process today of carrying out the bodies of nine miners killed in a coal mine shaft 8,000 feet back from the entrance and nearly 90 feet underground.

A mine employee said it would take some time for the workers to bring the victims to the surface because the shaft area was small. Mine officials, police and other authorities have refused to discuss the accident with reporters.

Also a candidate was Harold Stassen, thirteenth governor of Minnesota who had sought the nomination twice before and who got two votes this time, as did Mayor Lindsay of New York, a non-candidate.

The entire area leading to the River Queen mine entrance was cordoned off soon after the accident.

In Washington, the U.S. bureau of mines said it received a preliminary report that the blast resulted from the accidental detonation of explosives being transported deep in the mine.

The mine, owned and operated by Peabody Coal Co., is just south of this small coal-mining community in Western Kentucky.

AS FAVORITE SONS

Entered as favorite sons were Gov. Walter Hickel of Alaska, Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller of Arkansas, a brother of the New York candidate, Senator Hiram Fong of Hawaii, the newest American state, retiring Senator Frank Carlson of Kansas, Gov. George Romney of Michigan, who actively sought the nomination twice before and did not win it again.

As a mine employee said it would take some time for the workers to bring the victims to the surface because the shaft area was small. Mine officials, police and other authorities have refused to discuss the accident with reporters.

SUPERPORT FACES 'SMOG BANK' THREAT

second look

The provincial cabinet was warned Wednesday its development plans for the Roberts Bank superport will only create another needless "smog bank."

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan made the charge here and said he is asking for a "second look" at the railway route and industrial sites associated with the plans.

Mr. Strachan said the cabinet decision to permit construction of a rail route through the Delta area and along the beach shores of Boundary Bay will destroy the "last remaining recreation area for the seething thousands of people on the Lower Mainland."

He said the Canadian National Railways now comes within four miles of the superport site, and it should be allowed to build the link to the docks without cutting up the beachfront.

He also attacked the plan to establish 3,500 acres of industrial sites along the shore and on reclaimed land at Roberts Bank.

Mr. Strachan said in the whole lower mainland now there are only 7,000 acres used for industry and another 16,000 acres have been serviced but not yet developed by industry.

He said with so much undeveloped land available "there is no urgent need to create this new smog bank" along a waterfront more suited to recreational development.

Johnny-Come-Lately Role Damaged Rocky's Chances

By CHARLES DUMAS

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's failure to win the Republican presidential nomination almost surely will be recorded as a classic example of the time-worn adage: "He who hesitates is lost."

If it is possible to blame any one element for Rockefeller's undoing, it is that he entered the race much too late.

"It all goes back to March 21," said William Miller, the 1964 Republican vice-presidential nominee, who labored in Rockefeller's cause this time.

On that chilly spring day in New York City, Rockefeller jolted political professionals and dismayed ardent admirers by announcing that he would not seek the nomination.

He had been expected to fill the void left by the withdrawal of Michigan Gov. George Romney, whom Rockefeller had encouraged to carry the so-called moderate Republican banner against Nixon.

Rockefeller had been besieged by a wide variety of influential Republicans across the country, including several governors, to declare his candidacy. They had taken him many previous disclaimers of interest as stalling tactics and had assumed he would now agree that the time had come to make his move.

Almost six weeks later, Rockefeller went before another news conference, this time in Albany, N.Y., and declared that he had changed his mind—he now would pursue the nomination with "all my heart."

But damage had been done to his prospects. He not only lost valuable campaign time but also the allegiance of supporters.

If Rockefeller came in too late, it certainly was not with too little.

The multi-millionaire mounted a campaign fuelled by lavish expenditures of money and energy.

He poured millions of dollars—the latest estimate is $300,000—but rivals believe the figure is much higher—into a dazzling advertising campaign, a heavily staffed campaign headquarters and a jet-powered air caravan that criss-crossed the country many times.

Rockefeller pitched for support through an outpouring of professionally produced television commercials and a series of full-page ads in major newspapers throughout the country.

The defeated candidate told a news conference early today: "I think this convention genuinely preferred Dick Nixon and the same was true for the leadership of the party. It's as simple as that."

Immigration Trails Off And Aussies Wonder Why

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
Canadian Press Correspondent

MELBOURNE (CP) — Australia's minister for immigration, Billy Snedden, has returned from a world trip to face the hard fact that the country's immigration program is flagging.

Something has happened to Australia's campaign for immigrants since the exciting days soon after the Second World War when ambitious population targets were set.

The population is 1948 was 7,500,000 and the aim was an annual increase of 2½ per cent—1½ per cent natural growth and one per cent from immigration. It was expected, on that basis, that the population would have risen to 13,500,000 by now, reaching nearly 22,000,000 by 1988.

But Australia has only barely reached the 12,000,000 mark. At the present rate of increase it will have reached only 18,000,000 by 1988—4,000,000 short of the target.

The number of immigrants who arrived in Australia in the year ended June 30 was 15,000, below the target of 148,000.

Car Parts Thief Awaits Sentence

A man who police said stole a radiator from one car and a radio aerial from another will be sentenced Tuesday on two charges of theft.

Court was told Raymond Adams, of no fixed address, took the aerial from a car parked at Tony's Body Shop, 721 Fisgard. Police said Adams took the radiator from King's Auto Repairs, 250 Government.

The offences were said to occur between July 13 and 26.

What makes this figure even less attractive is that more than 30,000 immigrants left Australia for good and returned to their homelands—23,000 of them Britons. They are lightly-skinned Asians.

He also said that he would like immigrants from South America, though he specified they would have to be of European origin.

Why are so many immigrants returning home? Snedden said housing is a big problem and that the better social services and high living standards in European countries are tempting people back.

One newspaper letter writer pointed to another reason: conscientization of 20-year-olds for Vietnam.

Whatever the reasons, Australia has a people problem—it can't get enough of them.

APPLICATIONS RISE

Snedden believes the economic squeeze in Britain is only just beginning to take effect and says that in the last few months the number of Britons applying for assisted passages has been a record.

He says Australia's population will still be built on a European basis. Although the door to non-European migrants has been opened slightly, the White Australia policy is still a fact.

There now are 40,000 persons of non-European origin living permanently in Australia, plus 15,000 more of mixed descent. The government has no intention of changing the ethnic character of the country and officials point to the racial troubles in Britain and the United States when asked why.

Time and Tide

IN WINNING THE REPUBLICAN presidential nomination with an unassailable majority on the first ballot Richard Nixon demonstrated, politically speaking, a rags-to-riches triumph. Condemned to relative obscurity by a series of political defeats in the past eight years, his chances of another bid for the White House were minimal until recently. But last night in Miami Beach four years of dedicated and relentless background preparation paid off, and Mr. Nixon once more has the most powerful office in his country—perhaps in the world—as his next objective.

Such circumstances can be of great advantage to a man in Mr. Nixon's position: they can also add greatly to his responsibility, for with larger power goes a larger liability for blame if mistakes are made. In the new candidate's favor are the divisions within the rival Democratic Party, and the lack of outstanding allure in the two main Democratic hopefuls. Mr. Nixon may have the ability to win the presidency in November—the time and the conditions may be right for him on this occasion. But the tasks awaiting the winner are enough to baffle even a man of Mr. Nixon's talents and intelligence.

It may be that the country at this particular juncture is ready for the somewhat rightist approach which he espouses. If so, he may win its support. But such a change of trend, of political climate, must itself evoke problems in an era which basically is headed in the opposite direction. The presidency will not be a goal achieved but a gateway to almost insupportable responsibilities.

Throughout his campaign Mr. Nixon stressed unity. He has apparently been able to win the nomination while still retaining the unity of his party; he now proposes to win the presidency while preserving the unity of the country. His power has

Perhaps a Right to Dissent?

COL FRANK KOSSA, ASSISTANT director of the United States Selective Service, in a Calgary speech, offered a sweeping condemnation of draft-dodgers leaving his country for asylum in Canada. If they make bad American citizens, he says, they will more than likely be irresponsible Canadians. It seems reasonable to assume that in the large inflow of young Americans who leave their own nation to come here there will be both good and bad—some evading what Col. Kossa considers citizenship responsibilities for reasons of conscience, some for reasons not so praiseworthy.

But when Col. Kossa delivers his blanket judgment, he might give

The North Comes Alive

CANADA'S NORTHLAND HAS been a subject for the inspired rhetoric of politicians for decades. Mr. Diefenbaker rode into office in 1957 with a "vision" of Arctic development. But few actually travelled there to see what they were talking about. Mr. Trudeau, in fact, is the first of 15 prime ministers to make the journey.

The benefits of his 9,000-mile air odyssey may not be immediately apparent, but in the long run they should be two-fold. The observations and knowledge stored away by Mr. Trudeau will aid policy decisions that will be needed to meet the demands of change and growth in the north. But what may prove even

When Will It End?

THE U.S. JOINT ATOMIC ENERGY Committee is urging the government to embark on a costly new project to develop faster and deadlier nuclear submarines. Claiming to have secret information that the Soviet Union is outstripping the U.S. in this field, the Committee is pushing its case hard with warnings of the security danger involved if action is not taken immediately.

What makes the Committee's campaign noteworthy however, is its claim that the U.S. Defence Department has "grossly underestimated" Soviet advances in N-subs. The Committee scores the Pentagon's "apparent unwillingness or inability" to cope with the alleged Russian threat.

There are not many people in the world who would accuse the Pentagon of being too dovish or unresponsive to the country's defence needs. On this basis alone, doubt must be cast on the Committee's cause. The Kremlin likely has its hawks continually pressing the government to spend more and more on weapons on the grounds of countering some new threat from the United States, whether real or imaginary. This is the way the arms race is perpetuated and we all are the losers.

Growth Comes Where Head Offices Go

HEAD offices have made the difference between spectacular growth or slow strangulation for the cities of the west. Where one head office is located, others tend to congregate, and often without regard to either economic or political logic. Winnipeg became the financial centre of the West because the first western head offices of the banks were established there. The headquarters of the big retailers and wholesalers attracted other head offices.

Winnipeg became the head office centre for the grain trade because it was where the banks were all handy. As grain growing expanded, one new grain company followed another to Winnipeg, because everybody else was there. When the Wheat Board displaced the wheat pit, it too located in Winnipeg. Yet the centre of the Canadian grain trade might more logically have been located at Fort William, Regina or even Montreal or Vancouver.

Airways Example

The head office of Canadian Airways, Canada's first major airline, was in Winnipeg. It attracted a cluster of related air industry companies. Winnipeg's doom as a world air centre was sealed when Hon. C. D. Howe opted for Montreal as head office for Trans-Canada Airlines.

The most spectacular example of the importance of head office location is Calgary which would still be a half asleep cow-town without the oil industry head offices. There was no sound reason for Calgary to be chosen as the oil capital of the country. After the 1957 Leduc discovery, oil exploration all centred in the Edmonton and northern areas. Edmonton was where the government was, and the oil barons did all their big financial deals with the government. Yet without notable exception, all the big companies located their brass in Calgary, not in Edmonton.

Calgary Oil Capital

The explanation is simple. Calgary happened to be where all the oil companies were located back in 1947-50. They were the Canadian companies which had discovered Turner Valley and were still in business in Calgary. The American companies simply went where the head offices happened to be at that time. It is almost as if there is a herd instinct operating in the economic field. In any event, Calgary zoomed from a population of 80,000 to 380,000 in two decades.

All this has been happening, moreover, without any of the cities paying much, if any, attention to the fact. What bemuses city authorities is industrial expansion. All have special departments engaged in trying to lure manufacturers to their towns. Any time a new industry comes in, the news is shouted from the city hall steps. But far more important head offices sneak into town unannounced.

FROM MIAMI BEACH

Richard Nixon Will Not Fly on One Wing

THE wiseacres say that Richard M. Nixon will assume a middle-of-the-road posture, instead of seeking to win a majority in November by stealing votes from former governor George Wallace. The majority of old fashioned politicians are urging this decision; and Nixon is a pretty old fashioned politician himself.

Yet in order to judge the real mood of the country, one must look beyond the confines of the Republican convention to the standing among the voters of the rather conspicuously uninvited guests. If you begin with George Wallace, you can easily see why some of the hard-nosed Nixon people have been tempted by a bolder, far more right-wing electoral strategy.

If you look at what would happen if George Wallace, by some miracle, were persuaded to go home and shut up, you find that as of now, Richard Nixon would have a commanding majority in a race against Hubert Humphrey. And you further find that if Nixon could only steal 60 per cent of George Wallace's current support, he would still be in the lead, albeit by a much narrower margin, in the country as a whole and even in the states above the Mason-Dixon line.

As of now, in short, adding Nixon's old line Republican support to Wallace's racist and white supremacist support, you find that the country's mood is further to the right than it has been in a good many decades. This was the real meaning of the sudden stir of conservative resistance to Nixon balancing the ticket with a running mate from the opposite wing of the Republican Party.

One thing is already clear, Richard Nixon's campaign will be directly keyed to this national mood. By October, he will be seeking to pick up votes among the Wallace enthusiasts, without regard to his vice-presidential choice.

That leads, in turn, to the other uninvited and conspicuously absent guest here in Miami Beach. Vice President Humphrey is the virtually certain Democratic nominee. He will inherit the leadership of a discontented, divided and depressed party.

Even without reaching for the Wallace voters, Richard Nixon is also the unique Republican. As of now, to be sure, the conventional wisdom is that even Nixon cannot work a rapid cure of the Democrats' internal ills. But anyone who looks a few weeks ahead can see that the conventional wisdom is pretty certain to be proven wrong by the middle of September or the beginning of October. Given the patterns of national feeling, Nixon can hardly refrain from doing and saying just those things that will bring the Democrats together again.

Yet the question then will be whether a united Democratic Party, with a decent, moderate, obviously good man at the head of the ticket, can compete successfully in the disturbingly right-wing climate that now exists. No one can be sure until November.

Avoid the Voids

Quebec Le Soleil

Prime Minister Trudeau's plan to reassess Canada's defence policy has spread doubts about the worth of the presence of Canadian troops in West Germany. The Germans are more worried about this re-appraisal than anyone else.

The best way to preserve peaceful co-existence is to avoid creating too tempting military voids in Western Europe.

It is too soon to dismantle NATO. Canada, which played an important role in setting up the organization, must not give the signal for its dismantling.

Of course, our position within NATO can be discussed, but the sensitivity the West Germans have shown about our re-appraisal indicates their concern and the importance they place on Canada's contribution to NATO.

This should be kept in mind when the issue is debated in Ottawa.

Ugly Hues In Color Issues

One of the most pressing problems in Britain today is the acceptance and integration of the thousands of black-skinned people who have emigrated to that country and are located mostly in the cities. The suddenness and size of the influx and its concentration in urban localities have raised serious social problems unprecedented in the traditionally democratic nation. The searching editorial from the Observer, of London, reprinted below gives an idea of the revolution in theory and practice which is facing Britain in regard to its racial problem.

THE ugliest episodes of our imperial history (except the Slave Trade) may be yet to come. The fact that Britain is today a multi-racial society is, of course, a direct outcome of our imperial story: the Indians, Pakistanis, West Indians and Africans who are now residents of this country and claim the protection of its laws came here because we made them citizens of the Commonwealth. The question now is whether members of the Tory Party, the party that is proudest of Britain's imperial history, will support the Labour and Liberal Parties in attempting to keep the new, multi-racial Britain a civilized community with decent standards of behaviour. If they fail to join in setting standards of decency in this obviously dangerous field of behaviour, they will become, in some degree, directly responsible for whatever acts of violence may follow.

If anyone doubts that British "immigrant" families—"immigrant" being a euphemism for dark-skinned—are being subjected to social bullying, and that this bullying is likely to lead to physical violence, they should read the restrained reports of what is happening in Mr. Enoch Powell's constituency. It is impossible to read these accounts without fearing that race riots may occur in Wolverhampton (admittedly one of the worst examples in the country)—unless extraordinary steps are taken.

Minimum Requirement

The minimum requirement to avoid bloody brawls and racial persecution is the firm maintenance of our traditional standards of decent behaviour. This is where the Tories have an awesome responsibility.

But restraint alone may not prevent race relations from worsening and will certainly not be enough to improve them. Positive action is also needed, and here we are all involved. The activities of otherwise of the Labour Government, of official bodies, of academics, television and the Press must all share responsibility for what is and is not being done to help our perplexed fellow citizens of all shades cope with this inherently difficult and unfamiliar situation.

The first point to make is that restrain in expressing opinions on racial issues is not the same as concealing facts or leaving it to the wild men to bring discussion of these matters out into the open. Who today knows whether race relations in Britain as a whole or in particular cities are getting better or worse? If only the experts know, it means that the public is being deliberately kept in ignorance (if even the experts don't know, it implies a worse degree of ostrich-like timidity). All of us involved in the information business are implicated in this failure...

What the intellectuals need to be doing is to face as courageously as possible the unsolved problem of how to make a multi-racial society work. Are the American aims and methods producing success or failure? Is the old Roman ideal of common citizenship and equality before the law together with cultural diversity a more hopeful formula? Just because the South Africans and the American Southern States have made 'separate development' and 'separate but equal' synonyms of hypocrisy and cruelty, we should not be intimidated from exploring the possibilities of voluntary cultural diversity—which is something quite different. In Wolverhampton, it would mean encouraging sports grounds and clubs on a communal basis—in addition to those that must be open to all. It would also mean seeing that the Sikhs were not given a rubbish dump as their sports ground.

Advantages of Diversity

The advantages of encouraging voluntary cultural diversity is that the Englishman may feel less threatened if he does not fear that he is losing control over his own way of life. He may also learn to respect his non-English neighbours more readily if he sees them wishing to preserve their own distinctive cultural identity.

Naturally, cultural diversity must never mean inferior or even different education: and it must never mean discrimination in job or housing. These are sacred matters if common citizenship is to be a reality. But it is worth noticing that the English, who made Disraeli Premier, have never regarded a British Jew as an Englishman; have never respected a Jew who was not proud of his Jewishness; and have come to admire British Jews more since the success of Zionist separatism than they did before.

If even half of our Wolverhampton report is correct, Britain today is confronted by an imminent danger of slipping into real racial atrocities. But Britain also has the chance of becoming the first country to make a success of a multi-racial society. What is quite impossible is to remove the whole problem: even atrocities would not achieve that, unless a British Auschwitz is to be built. To create a successful multi-racial society would certainly tax our tolerance, humility, honesty and ingenuity to the limit: but it would be as great an achievement as any in our history and as valuable a contribution as any that could be made.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times, August, 1968.

It is anticipated that the Italian cruiser Puglia will make a longer stay at Esquimalt than at first intended. The officers of the war vessel expressed themselves as more than pleased with Victoria and the Puglia will probably remain here until Saturday or Monday, proceeding then to Vancouver.

Since the cruiser was open for inspection hundreds have visited her, the officers courteously supplying the guides to each party of visitors. The launches at Esquimalt have done big business carrying passengers.

The best way to preserve peaceful co-existence is to avoid creating too tempting military voids in Western Europe.

Wage Plan Buoys Labor Peace Hopes

By ALVIN HAMILTON

The rash of strikes each spring and summer brings increasing intensity to the question, "Are strikes necessary?"

Occasionally a gleam of light eases the mood of gloom and helplessness that seizes most Canadians.

Individual industries in Canada have good records of peaceful adjustment of differences in wages, working conditions and grievance procedures. Some use profit sharing, others simply pay higher wages than other industries.

Once in a while there is mature leadership in both management and union that quietly and responsibly share the growth in the industry without pricing themselves out of competition. On the more doubtful side, I suspect, there are cases of management and union leaders combining to take advantage of the market and the consumer.

But the most hopeful development is a wage formula devised by a young west coast economist as the result of a study commissioned as part of a collective agreement between a plumbers' union and a management bargaining group. It points the way to mutual benefits for both labor and management through responsible co-operation, and not at the expense of the consumer.

Certainly a major factor in rising costs is the frequent use of strikes or lock-outs. Not only do those who are unorganized suffer, not only do those on fixed incomes suffer, but the very striker and company that are in confrontation suffer.

Grim Future

Louis Rasmussen, governor of the Bank of Canada, has made it brutally clear that rising incomes without increasing productivity to match are leading us to continuing inflation. The Economic Council of Canada has laid bare the grim future before Canada if our present gap in productivity per hour compared with our main competitor, the United States, is allowed to continue.

Some people suggest that the answer lies in compulsory arbitration, particularly in the public sector. The case has not yet been made for this approach. Australia has had compulsory arbitration procedures for years, but these fail almost as often as they work for the simple reason that the Australian attitude, both of management and worker, does not lend itself to judicial approaches. In many parts of Canada the same observation could be made.

Last fall a unique four-year labor agreement was signed by the Victoria Plumbers' Union Local 324 and an employers' association which set wage increases to living costs and productivity. The pact was based on an economic study commissioned by the union and employers in Vancouver, where the terms were subsequently rejected by the plumbers. In this summer when strikes are a prime topic in Canada, the findings of economist John de Wolf have won attention in the East and are discussed here by former Conservative cabinet minister Alvin Hamilton in an article for The Toronto Star.

We are not yet ready for this approach.

We are a regional country. Some parts are almost American in their outlook, such as the Great Lakes industrial complex. Other parts simply acquiesce to conditions. The key to the Canadian solution is that each industry in each part of the country will require its own style of agreement. It must be of mutual advantage to both management and labor. It must be based on rank and file understanding — a democratic decision.

Better Way

Now, hope has emerged from a precedent set on the west coast and described in a book with an unappetizing title Wage Movements and Wage Determinants in British Columbia. The author's name: John de Wolf.

His particular study, commissioned by both labor and management, focusses on Local 170 of the United Association of Plumbers and Pipefitters, on the one hand, and the Mechanical Industrial Relations Association, on the other. The decision to proceed jointly was part of a collective agreement reached in 1964 in which both parties had come to hope that there was a better way to do things.

De Wolf proposes a new wage formula based on three principles:

"First, that real income to labor should be protected by adjustment based on the cost of living.

"Second, that increases in real income to labor should be tied only to productivity.

"Third, that the cost of living-productivity formula works best in conditions of manpower equilibrium; that should be undertaken to maintain short and long-run efforts to balance supply with demand; and that a central component of this supply is an adequate level of manpower utilization to increase labor's annual income."

Almost everyone has talked of these principles, but action in Canada and, I expect, in the U.S. is nil. It leads to this conclusion of John de Wolf:

"The mechanical construction industry is not the best place in which to initiate a program for wage cycle rationalization. The industry nevertheless offers two compensating advantages: First, following a period of bitter conflict and gradual reacquaintance, it signed the first five year agreement in collective bargaining in British Columbia (and in its continental industry) in 1964; and has established a remarkable climate of trust; second, and perhaps more important, it is the only industry that has expressed itself as willing to try."

The essence of this long-term agreement is trust of both parties. Probably the exhaustion and frustration on both sides made them willing to give co-operation a chance. But it was the quantitative study of John de Wolf that convinced their minds that there was economic benefit in a mutual effort to achieve a common goal — increased real income for both sides without increased costs to the consumer.

His study demonstrates that "climatic wage settlements in British Columbia occur at precisely the wrong time." In plain terms labor never really wins a battle. Nor does management. Certainly the public always suffers. Another way of putting it is that "labor wage gains are deferred gains."

Serve Interests

To put the results of the study by de Wolf into my words, I would say that management and labor would serve their economic interests if they would, on their joint initiative, agree to long-term agreements which would include:

• A cost-of-living clause.

• An agreed upon productivity gain rate which gain would be shared on a formula mutually arrived at.

• Constant negotiation to allow for external influences and new information.

• Built-in inducements to maximize productivity.

• Participation of both sides in a program of labor supply, training, etc.

In addition, I would add a grievance procedure that acted continually and quickly.

The agreement in British Columbia is a beacon for all to steer towards.

Christians Confront Dilemma: Can Violence be Justified?

By LOUIS CASSELS

What is the appropriate Christian attitude toward violent revolutionary acts?

Some church members are surprised that anyone should even raise the question. To them, it seems perfectly clear that followers of Christ should at all times abhor violence, uphold law and order, and obey the government.

But another point of view is expressed in a statement adopted recently by the policy-making general board of the National Council of Churches in the U.S. It holds that violence, under some circumstances, may be a lesser evil than continued toleration of injustice.

The statement suggests that Christians should first try through political processes to change laws or policies they consider unjust. If that fails, they may move on to "civil disobedience," defined in the statement as "peaceable violation of a law deemed to be unjust . . . with recognition of the state's legal authority to punish the violator."

Finally, the statement says, "We recognize that when justice cannot be secured either through action within the existing structures or through civil disobedience, an increasing number of Christians may feel called to seek justice through resistance or revolution."

The National Council statement has been applauded in some quarters as a courageous affirmation that God's law has a higher claim on a Christian's obedience than any human law.

In addition, I would add a grievance procedure that acted continually and quickly.

The agreement in British Columbia is a beacon for all to steer towards.

My theory — true for cocktail party is a form of shock treatment comparable to the snake pit of earlier times. So great is the horror of it, so keen the sense of are reduced to triviality.

greeted each other by rubbing noses. The usual cocktail party types were on hand — languid immigrants, inferior decorators, insulting engineers, gloomy dames, misplaced trustees, impractical nurses, a dean of women who had been fired for having men in her room at all hours of the day and night, a marriage counselor who announced that his third wife had just left him for the fifth time, and a psychiatrist who kept getting down on his hands and knees and frisking about the place, nipping at the women's heels.

It is customary at these gatherings to have the phonograph on at full blast; this forces people to shout and scream at each other, which in turn causes them to get bagged more quickly, which is why they went to the party in the first place.
Having no opinions or information worth bellowing, I customarily listen to those of others. Standing near a group of women, I caught the following fragments:

Likes Her Tea

"The only thing I have against men is me . . . The Naked Ape is disgusting, I stayed up all night reading it
. . . I don't know how old she is exactly, but she does enjoy a nice hot cup of tea . . . Even a newspaperman is better than no man at all . . . We eventually had to leave Picton; the pace was too fast . . . I keep having this awful nightmare; a big brute of a man is chasing me, and I escape . . . I found out early on Bay Street that all men are married, but some are less married than others . . . I didn't mind Jack's cruelty and extravagance; what finished it off was the way he kept clearing his throat every five minutes."

Going out in the garden, I found a young man who told me, "I hate university; but I have to stay there so I can graduate and get a good job, and pay back the money I borrowed to go to university."

The young woman with him said she had a different problem. "It's my parents.
They're so good and kind and trusting, and I'm so rotten.
When I come home drunk at two in the morning and tell them
I was in a car accident; they believe me. This makes me feel guilty, and so I become twice as rotten. I wish I had parents like Jim; her father drinks his pay, and her mother runs around with every man on the block, so she doesn't have to feel guilty about being even more rotten than I am."

Why I Hate Beer

Going back into the house, I listened in on a group of men:
"When the postal strike ends, how will people be able to tell? . . . I've at last figured it out, Doris Day is her own grandmother . . . I know beer's the drink of moderation, that's why I hate it . . . When your plane lands in Toronto, you have to set your watch back 30 years . . . I'm still looking for a woman who measures down to my standards . . . I didn't mind Marge's boozing and infidelity;
what drove me out was that she never changed the blade after shaving her legs with my razor."

It seemed at this point I'd had enough, so I finished the Scotch-and-tonic someone had pressed on me, said farewell to the hostess, and made an inglorious exit by tripping over the doorknob.

Still, I was safely out; I wouldn't need to do it again for a long time; and I walked steadily south until the crumpling tenements, polluted air, garbage-littered streets, and screams of hold-up victims informed me I was back in civilization.

The Gribble Is Wont to Nibble On Wooden Things in the Sea

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

The marine relatives of the common sowbug of the garden are a varied lot whose ancestry goes back to early times. During their long sojourn in the sea they have shown great ability to adapt themselves to a wide range of habitats with the result that these creatures are now found in all oceans of the world and in almost every environment.

Their basic body plan is simple: a more or less oval shape, flattened from above downward and provided with seven pairs of legs. Because these appendages are about equal in size the group has been given the technical name Isopod which means "equal feet." However the individual kinds are so poorly known by the layman that they lack common names except in one or two cases.

Although they are widespread and are probably found at all depths they are most abundant in the intertidal zone where they act as scavengers picking up whatever food they can find. Many species frequent beds of seaweed where they live upon decaying plant material. At least one kind is fond of flesh and where they are numerous they will quickly reduce a dead animal to skeleton.

A related species which is sometimes abundant on a sandy beach will bite the toes of persons wading in the shallow water. Usually these creatures start by nipping the tender skin between the toes and if the wader stands too long in one place an uncomfortable stinging sensation is experienced.

Another very common isopod and one of the few that has a vernacular name is the gribble which does a great deal of damage to unprotected wooden structures. This minute creature, less than  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch long, makes shallow tunnels usually in the direction of the grain.

As the roof of the burrow flakes away new tunnels are started or the old ones are deepened so that where these isopods are numerous the outer surface of the wood is rapidly destroyed. Piles with an hour-glass constriction at the low water line are a familiar sight where gribbles are present.

While most isopods live an independent life, some prefer to associate themselves with other animals. For example one species is always found on the abdomen of a mud shrimp and another between the spines of the large purple sea urchin of our rocky coast; both live in harmony with their hosts as commensals.

More destructive are many other kinds of isopods which attach themselves to the skin, gills or other parts of various fishes and crustaceans including shrimps and crabs. Often they are unrecognizable as isopods when the body undergoes degenerate changes, but a study of the young stages clearly shows their isopod ancestry.

While these parasites may not kill the creatures to which they are attached, they often prevent them from growing normally or from breeding.

Another group whose members have completely left the sea but which now live in fresh water are the pond slaters, found in the bottom debris of any permanent pool.

In structure and general appearance both kinds closely resemble the marine species from which they originated a long time ago.

The Gribble

Bricklayers Sidetracked By Builders

At least two attempts by Victoria's striking bricklayers to picket job sites have been foiled by general contractors who have temporarily terminated masonry subcontracts, a spokesman said today.

When the contract is closed, the bricklayers can no longer consider the building site their place of work and cannot legally strike.

T. B. Fleming of Vancouver, business agent for Local 1 of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union of America said two building projects still are being struck.

They are the federal forestry laboratory off Burnside Road and a Sooke School.

At issue is a contract renewal. The union is seeking a standard B.C. contract settlement. It has been achieved outside Victoria and will raise the hourly wage to $4.77 over two years. Present Victoria wage is $4.

Mr. Fleming, in the capital for the strike, said of about 13 bricklayers out of work when the strike began at the weekend, about half have returned to work. One contractor has signed the new agreement.

Earlier he said the Victoria issue boils down to retroactive pay to the expiry of the last contract in April, plus an additional eight cents an hour for travel beyond five miles.

Five Charges Get Variety Of Penalties

An 18-year-old youth on Wednesday was fined a total of $70, given a suspended sentence and placed on a $250 six-month good behaviour bond on five charges relating to driving and drinking.

Michael Sessions, 2100 Brighton Ave. was fined $15 for causing a disturbance, $15 for being a minor in possession of liquor, $15 for driving without insurance and $25 for driving without a driver's licence.

The suspended sentence and good behaviour bond was given on a charge of consuming in a public place.

Sessions was charged with the offense July 27 when stopped by Oak Bay police on Esquimalt Street.

He was forbidden by Magistrate William Ostler to own or drive a car for six months or to obtain a driver's license.

Magistrate Ostler said the accused was utterly irresponsible and would have to be extraordinarily careful in the future.

$71,795 BILL TO POOR PEOPLE

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sponsors of the Poor People's Campaign have been sent a $71,795 bill by the national park service for the cost to the government of Resurrection City.

A park service spokesman said immediate payment was requested. He indicated that if the bill is not paid, the government may seek the money through a law suit.

Four copies of the bill were sent by registered mail to the Southern Christian Leadership Conference offices here and in Atlanta, and to various officials.

The bill breaks down the costs of the campout earlier this year in this way:

- Dismantling and removing wooden huts that composed resurrection city, $4,859 dollars.
- Repairing and replacing trees, $3,350.
- Repairing and replacing shrubbery, $1,726.
- Replacing 300 feet of snow fence, $650.
- Removing paint thrown on D.C. war memorial at site, $300.
- Repairing slate walls around memorial, $500.
- Replacing two park benches, $100.

The bill did not include another $35,000 cost to restore grass at the campsite.

Luxton Fair May Impose Limitations

Agnes Chidlow, entry-secretary for the Luxton Fair, said Wednesday over 1,000 entries had been received with more indicated.

But space is at a premium and a limitation might have to be imposed on late comers.

"To date, we can still find space for entries already received but today I've been quite busy on the phone taking more."

The only livestock entries in the fair — taking place Friday and Saturday at Luxton fairgrounds — are from 4-H competitors. The reason given for the limitation is that the buildings in which cattle, rabbits and chickens were usually penned burned down last year.

As well as a two-day gymkhana for western and English style riding, there will be an extensive home-made wine competition and a three-mile husband and wife wheelbarrow race.

The wheelbarrow race takes place 7:30 p.m. Friday, with $25, $15 and $10 prizes for the first three finishers.

It will start in front of the RCMP offices in Colwood, go to Sooke Road, then to Happy Valley Road and up Marwood to the fairgrounds. Husband and wife may alternate as they please to provide motive power.

$500,000 Bail Asked For 5 Drug Suspects

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Crown application was made in magistrate's court Wednesday for bail totalling $500,000 for five men alleged to have been involved in "one of the greatest" heroin distribution operations here.

Charged with conspiring with each other, and persons unknown, to traffic in the drug are Edward Ponak, 33; Romeo Zanatta, 42, and Ido Zamai, 35, of Vancouver; Conrad William Gunn, 35, of North Vancouver and John McKeoff, 34, of suburban Burnaby.

The five were arrested at their homes Wednesday by RCMP and city police drug squad officers. Police said the arrests came after three years of investigation.

Asking $100,000 bail for each suspect, prosecutor Norma Christie said the Crown will offer evidence to indicate minimum drug trafficking of 8,000 capsules of heroin with a retail value of about $120,000.

The men were remanded to today when bail is expected to be set.

The charges allege the five conspired to traffic in heroin between Aug. 15, 1965, and last July 18.

LAWYER OBJECTS

Lawyer H. A. D. Oliver, representing Ponak, Zamai and Gunn, objected that much of the heroin allegedly involved was father of one, a former fisherman and mining developer, and Gunn as a married businessman who owns real estate.

He said he agreed bail should be significant in view of the serious charges but said $100,000 each is too high.

Lawyer Herbert Groberman said Zamai, single, earns $120

a week from two part-time jobs.

Red Base Of Supply Occupied

VIET CONG BACK OFF ON SAIGON OFFENSIVE

SAIGON, South Vietnam (WP)—Viet Cong plans to attack Saigon this summer have apparently been postponed several times. U.S. sources said Wednesday.

The aborted enemy plans came to light in captured Viet Cong documents, dated from early June to mid-July, and in prisoner interrogations.

"We do not know yet what military or political considerations caused them to back off," said a U.S. specialist. "But we think much of the credit goes to the improvement in Saigon's defence set up."

One set of captured documents dated in mid-June focused on Viet Cong "subregion four (SR-4)" which embraces the capital and surrounding heavily populated Giadinh province. SR-4 was singled out as the key subregion in the "third general offensive" to be launched in late July or early August. But this was only the latest "time frame" set by the Communists for attacks on the capital.

SAIGON (AP) — American and South Vietnamese troops have invaded the A Shau Valley for the second time in 3½ months, disrupting the major Communist supply base again as part of their campaign to blunt the big North Vietnamese-Viet Cong offensive expected in the next month or so.

A fleet of 200 helicopters landed more than 3,000 soldiers of the U.S. 101st Air Cavalry Division and the South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division in the valley in the northern part of South Vietnam Sunday and Monday, but announcement of the operation was withheld until today for security reasons.

The U.S. command in Saigon said the force has met with "minimal resistance" so far. Probably warned by the heavy air activity that preceded the invasion, the North Vietnamese presumably pulled back across the nearby Laotian border.

U.S. headquarters reported that 15 North Vietnamese troops had been killed in the first four days of the operation. U.S. losses were two dead while eight South Vietnamese were killed.

The A Shau Valley is considered the biggest base area the Communist command has in South Vietnam. The valley extends 25 miles from northwest to southeast near the Laotian border and varies in width from 500 yards to 3½ miles.

Paper Makers Ratify New Pay Contract

OTTAWA (CP) — Workers at the Canadian International Paper Co. in nearby Gatineau, Que., Tuesday night ratified unanimously a two-year contract agreed on in Montreal Monday.

The contract covers 8,000 workers in six Eastern Canada mills and provides a basic hourly wage of $2.98—up 35 cents from the present $2.63.

A union spokesman said the agreement was endorsed without dissent by a meeting of the Gatineau workers. Affected were 1,300 members of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and 200 members of the United Paper Makers and Paper Workers Union.

Hanoi's Position Unchanged, Says U.S.

is taking "a more realistic position" by acknowledging the presence of its troops in South Vietnam.

If this report is correct, state department spokesman Carl E. Barth said at a press conference Wednesday, "it indicates a more realistic North Vietnamese position on the subject, and we will be interested in seeing if this position is reflected in the Paris talks."

A day earlier the department had shown itself to be sceptical of the statement attributed to Dong. Hanoi often reacts promptly to new stories like the one from Manila or editorial comment, but so far nothing on this subject from North Vietnam has been monitored in Washington.

During the day the number two negotiator in Paris, former deputy defence secretary Cyrus R. Vance, who returned to the U.S. for a few days this week, was kept abreast of the Paris talks at the state department.

Skil Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — Power Machinery Ltd. of Richmond, maker of gasoline-powered chain saws, has been purchased by Skil Corporation (Canada) Ltd. of Toronto.

Purchase price was not disclosed, but was effected through exchange of stock and cash.

Thomas Ward, president of Skil Canada, a subsidiary of the Skil Corporation of Chicago, said he will be acting manager but there will be no other changes among Power Machinery's 200 employees.

He said the company's product — "The Canadian" chain saw — fits perfectly into Skil's product range.

Denison Mines Ltd.

TORONTO (CP) — Denison Mines Ltd. had a consolidated net profit of $16,141,000 or $1.37 a share for the six months ended June 30 compared with $4,010,000 or 90 cents a share in the similar period last year.

The company said Wednesday the figures reflect a substantial increase in revenue from investments as well as higher uranium earnings.

Denison received $6,637,000 from operations in the first half compared with $4,390,000 in the similar 1967 period, the report showed. Revenue from investment in other companies was $3,098,000 compared with a loss of $505,000 last year.

Another $8,603,000 was received in advances against delivery of concentrates.

McKerlie Auto

LONDON, Ont. — McKerlie Automotive Limited has entered into an agreement to purchase all of the outstanding shares of Peterborough Automotive Supply Ltd., Peterborough, Ontario, for an undisclosed sum, it was announced here today by L. F. McKeerlie, founder and president of the firm bearing his name.

Japanese Juggle Cars

Demand for Japanese cars in Canada is so high it raises a distribution problem being alleviated by one company through shipments to both coasts.

David Caree, of David Motors in Victoria, said the Nissan Motor Co. had opened zone offices in eastern Canada in addition to its Vancouver terminal, the main distribution point for Datsun cars in Canada.

A recent shipload of cars landed at Halifax was "just to expedite delivery of cars," said Mr. Caree, who was in Japan a short time ago to discuss the supply of cars to Canada.

He noted that sales of Datsun are up 250 per cent in Canada this year, and the pool of incoming autos normally kept in Vancouver had been depleted.

To forestall any impression that Datsun distribution might be moved from the west coast, Mr. Caree gave assurance that Vancouver would remain the pool centre and Nissan would keep its inventory of parts valued at more than $1 million at its Beatty Street headquarters.

Ginter Men Scouting Prairies

REGINA (CP) — G. L. Colborne, Saskatchewan's deputy minister of industry and commerce, said in an interview Wednesday that representatives of Prince George brewer and contractor Ben Ginter visited his department a couple of weeks ago following visits to Manitoba and Alberta.

Mr. Ginter said Monday he was thinking of moving to some other province where they appreciate guys like me.

The deputy minister said it appeared Mr. Ginter was interested in establishing breweries in provinces other than British Columbia "but I'm afraid he's up against some tough competition."

Mr. Ginter's representatives made the call during a cross-country tour and were asked to return to Saskatchewan with more information on their plans. He had problems with unions and alleged ill-treatment at the hands of the B.C. government.

Companies Get Pipeline Rate Information

CALGARY (CP) — Syncrude Canada Ltd. said Wednesday it would expect to pay a pipeline tariff of between 10 and 18 cents a barrel for the movement of synthetic crude oil from the Athabasca oil sands to Edmonton if an application to produce 80,000 barrels a day of liquid hydrocarbons from the sands is approved.

The pipeline rate range for which intervening companies had been pressing after the hearing before the oil and gas conservation board started Tuesday, was given by Syncrude chairman Dr. G. W. Govier.

It was the first success by intervening companies in trying to obtain specific figures which were not contained in Syncrude's application.

Earlier, Chevron Standard Ltd. tried to obtain estimates of utility costs, but the board ruled Syncrude need not supply them.

Dr. Govier said intervening companies should only concern themselves with conservation, and the impact of oil sands production on the conventional segment of the petroleum industry.

A total of 14 companies had filed interventions in the Syncrude application.

Syncrude was formed several months ago by Imperial Oil Ltd., Royalite Oil Co. Ltd., Atlantic Richfield Co. and Canada-Cities Service Petroleum Corp.

Only one company, Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., has received permission to produce crude from the oil sands located near Fort McMurray, 250 miles northeast of Edmonton.

The hearings were expected to end sometime late next week.

NYSE Proposes Big Commission Cutback

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange proposed today a reduction in brokers' commissions on orders over 1,000 shares.

In a letter to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the exchange also proposed a prohibition of customer-directed give-ups — an arrangement under which commissions are split among brokers at the direction of the customer.

The exchange president, Robert W. Haack, and its chairman, Gustave Levy, told a news conference the proposal would amount to an across-the-board reduction of about seven per cent in floor brokerage and clearance charges between exchange members.

Proposed Trade Bloc Would Aid U.K.

LONDON (AP) — Backers call it "the political idea of the century." Opponents predict it will never get started. And even if it does, they say, their countries shouldn't join.

The idea, still limited mainly to debate among economists, call for the largest, richest area of free trade ever devised: the North Atlantic Free Trade Area, known as NAFTA.

It would bring together Canada, Britain, the United States and perhaps Japan and others into a tariff-free market with doors open to all.

To British supporters the idea would mean economic growth in the world's largest market, strengthen the Commonwealth, broaden an Atlantic attraction for the European Common Market, and revitalise the British-American partnership.

ANOTHER BACKER QUILTS MAJOR LEAGUE SCHEME...

Montreal's Baseball Situation Close to Explosion

MONTREAL (CP) — This city's volatile baseball situation was rocked late Wednesday night by the news that a third backer—Robert Irsay of Chicago—has pulled out.

The air-conditioning executive follows Montrealers J. Louis Lévesque, president of Blue Bonnets, Raceway and March Bougie, head of a funeral parlor enterprise, both of whom pulled out earlier.

And a meeting was set for 5 p.m. tonight of city officials including Gerry Snyder, vice-chairman of Montreal's executive committee, and sponsors to find solutions to various problems of the proposed team.

The Gazette said that in an interview with Charles Bronfman, president of the House of Seagram and another backer, it was told that Mr. Irsay severed his financial connection with the Montreal National League baseball franchise in a telegram to Mr. Bronfman.

Bronfman told the newspaper he got Irsay's telegram before a four-hour meeting Wednesday in Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau's office attended by Warren Giles, president of baseball's National League, city officials and two Canadian sponsors of the Montreal franchise.

Contents of the telegram, said Bronfman, were kept secret from all but those who attended the meeting.

He divulged the telegram's content only after being told of comments Irsay is said to have made in Chicago Wednesday to Chicago newspapers and radio stations.

Irsay is reported to have said Giles called him from Montreal at about noon EDT Wednesday and asked him to take over the franchise.

Irsay also is said to have told interviewers that Bronfman and the other Canadian sponsors were pulling out.

The other sponsors are Lorne Webster, whose family has newspaper interests; trucking executive Sidney Maislin and construction executive John Newman.

Bronfman told The Gazette Irsay's reported statements are "irresponsible . . . and quite shocking."

He continued:

"We do not need Mr. Irsay and the likes of Mr. Irsay."

"Here's what happened. Irsay himself resigned this morning, then called Gerry Snyder."

"If he's trying to drive a wedge between the sponsors and the city he faces an impossible task. . . ."

"Mr. Drapeau has been wonderful. He has done everything humanly possible to make this go. We all have."

"If we don't pull it off it won't be for lack of trying."

Giles came out of the meeting almost an hour before Mayor Drapeau and Bronfman and said the city and the backers have to work out a lease for the 25,000-seat Autostade "and it's not a p p o r t u n i t y that I be there."

Plans to put a roof over the Autostade, built for Expo '67, are "close to being rejected," the mayor said.

"It would be too costly for its purpose," he said.

The mayor said his council has not rejected plans for increasing seating at the Autostade and building a new park but added, he must be able to justify both expenditures.

Mayor Drapeau said that while there are no specific problems but a lot of problems relating to each other, the greatest difficulty is time.

"The period of time we have to execute everything is so short," he said. "We're working against the clock."

Giles said there wasn't as much accomplished as he would have liked.

He added he thought there would be a Montreal baseball franchise.

"But, they have until Aug. 15," he said.

That is the day the initial payment of the franchise—$120,000—is due. Bronfman said there will be no extension and none is being sought.

Bronfman said he was optimistic and would continue to be optimistic about the city's baseball future. He said he was prepared to allow play in the Autostade without a roof on it on a temporary basis.

Cowan the Hero As Ontario Wins

EDMONTON (CP)—A late surge by Gary Cowan, of Kitchener, Wednesday overcame an Alberta lead and gave Ontario the Willingdon Cup interprovincial golf team championship by three strokes.

Three over par after nine holes, and with his team trailing Alberta by two strokes, Cowan poured it on in a charging finish marred only by a one-over-par five on the last hole.

Before he got there though, he had rolled in birdie putts on 14, 16 and 17, and missed a three-footer for another birdie on 15.

Ontario's final total was 574. Alberta's was 571. The other teams in order were British Columbia 589, Manitoba 600, Quebec 604, Saskatchewan 607, Nova Scotia 624, New Brunswick-Prince Edward Island 626, and Newfoundland 633.

NHL Approval Required For Takeover of Seals

MONTREAL—Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, says Tuesday's takeover of the Oakland Seals differs greatly from an earlier attempt by a brewery to assume control of the club.

"The main reason is that these people intend to stay and operate in Oakland," Campbell said. "Another reason is that there are only three people involved now. There were nearly 50 before."

During the last hockey season, Labatt, Brewery Ltd. tried to buy the Oakland franchise and have it moved to Vancouver after the Seals ran into financial trouble and sparse attendance.

"They were told then, the league didn't approve of a transfer and that was the reply they were going to get if they applied for the transfer," the league president said.

LOANED MONEY

But the brewery didn't file a formal application with the league, and in the end, all they did was lend the Oakland team $70,000, Campbell said.

In the meantime, Vancouver applied for an NHL franchise of its own and was promised by the league's board of governors at the annual NHL meetings in Montreal in June that it would be included in future expansion plans.

Campbell said Tuesday's move, in which Potter Palmer of Chicago and John O'Neil Jr., of Miami joined with George Gillette of Chicago in assuming ownership of the Seals, would have to be approved by the league's board of governors.

Barry Van Gerbig, who was in partnership with Palmer and O'Neil last year, will remain associated with the club but not as an owner.

'We Cannot Give the Tour Away'

NEW YORK (AP) — There won't be any revolt of tournament pros against the parent Professional Golfers' Association, not this year at least.

"There will be no boycott," said Sam Gates, who represents the touring pros. "We are going to play straight through."

Gates, a New York lawyer, made his statement Wednesday night in Akron, Ohio, after a closed meeting with more than 100 golfers in Akron to compete in the American Golf Classic.

Before the meeting Gardner Dickinson, chairman of the four-man Players' Tournament Committee, had termed the situation "grave." The players are reported seeking the right to run the $5,600 tour without interference from the PGA.

"We want to resolve this thing within the framework of the PGA constitution," Gates said.

Nobody Informed Rookies Of 'The Great Hit Famine'

By The Associated Press

Joe Keough and Dave Campbell obviously haven't been around long enough to hear about 1968's Great Hit Famine.

Keough of Oakland Athletics and Campbell of Detroit Tigers had a total of six major league hits between them before Wednesday—all of them belonging to the Tiger infielder.

Today they both have their home runs and Keough also has a small spot in baseball's record book.

Keough, called up from the minor leagues earlier this week, became the 37th player to hit a homer in his first big league at bat—the 10th one to do it as a pinch hitter—and helped Oakland defeat New York Yankees 4-3 in the second game of a Wednesday doubleheader. New York took the opener 3-0.

Campbell, playing in his sixth game and first as a starter for the Tigers, tagged his first major league hit—a Homer naturally—Detroit defeated Cleveland Indians 6-1.

SOX BEAT SOX

Elsewhere in the American League Wednesday, Boston Red Sox clipped Chicago White Sox 3-2, California Angels dropped Washington Senators 4-2 and Baltimore Orioles swept a double header from Minnesota Twins 3-0 and 9-6. Detroit also completed a 5-3 victory over Cleveland in a game suspended after eight innings Tuesday night.

Keough got his first major league swing in the eighth inning of the second game with Oakland trailing 3-2 and tagged a Lindy McDaniel pitch into Yankee Stadium's right field seats. That tied the score and two innings later, Reggie Jackson singled Oakland's winning run home.

In the rain-delayed opener, Mel Stottlemyre won his 15th on a six-hitter with Joe Pepitone's two-run homer providing all the offence he needed.

Campbell's first Homer was somewhat less dramatic than Keough's. It came in the eighth inning with the Tigers already enjoying a 4-1 edge.

Detroit packed three runs in the first inning—two of them on Bill Freehan's double. Earl Wilson, with late-inning help from Daryl Patterson, won his 10th and Willie Horton clubbed his 27th home run.

Young George Stone, two days away from his 22nd birthday, just may have nailed down a permanent National League job at Atlanta.

"He looked real good to me," Atlanta manager Luman Harris said after the rookie lefty pitched and batted the Braves to a 10-2 victory over Chicago.

"We've got to give him another look or two before deciding on whether to protect him in the draft or not."

Stone, making only his second start of the season, drove in three runs, limited Chicago to six hits, struck out five and walked only one.

The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals whipped Cincinnati 3-1, Los Angeles defeated Pittsburgh 6-2 in a late night game, San Francisco nipped Philadelphia 4-3 in a day game and Houston fought off the New York Mets 4-3 in a game marred by a brawl.

Strongman Pitches Victory

Independents lost a crack at a third place in the Victoria Senior Baseball League final standings, losing 6-4 Wednesday to first place Transport Workers.

Bernie Strongman pitched a six-hitter for the victory at Topaz Park. He shut out Independents in the last four innings.

The game was a replay of a tied league game.

Campbell's first Homer was somewhat less dramatic than Keough's. It came in the eighth inning with the Tigers already enjoying a 4-1 edge.

Detroit packed three runs in

Cowichan Tripped By Error Splurge

Errors played a big part as Victoria Luckies edged Lake Cowichan 2-1 to take a best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Senior Men's Softball League semi-final at Heywood Avenue Park.

Luckies took advantage of errors while both Barry Jackson of Luckies and Art Watson of Lake Cowichan were pitching three-hitters.

Catcher Del Bertrand missed the ball on a called third strike, leading to a Luckies score in the first inning by Jim Moody. In the fifth inning, Ben Price doubled, went to third on an infield error and scored the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Jackson.

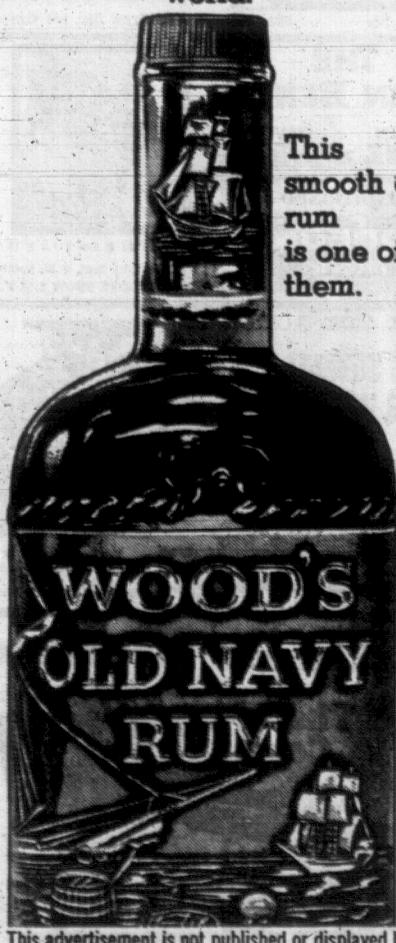

Luckies now meet Victoria Bottle Exchange in the best-of-seven final, with the first game slated for Friday at Heywood Avenue at 6:45 p.m.

800 telephone calls an hour to stations.

That means such ABC stars as Elizabeth Montgomery of Bewitched, Roy Thinnes of The Invaders and Sally Field of Flying Nun outrated Richard Nixon, Nelson Rockefeller and the rest.

The Arbitron ratings showed ABC had 32 per cent of the viewing audience Tuesday night during its 90-minute convention summary, compared with CBS's 28 per cent and NBC's 40 per cent.

This was an increase from ABC's Monday night summary, according to the ratings, when the network had 23 per cent of the audience compared with CBS's 24 per cent and NBC's 37 per cent.

ABC, which competed with the other networks in gavel-to-gavel convention coverage in 1964, decided against it this year after having drawn as low as 0.5 per cent of the viewing audience four years ago, and because its operating budget is strapped for cash.

SENSATIONAL skydiving display by RAF Falcon parachute team will be one of the many features at the Abbotsford International Air Show, largest of its kind in North America, which will be held Friday and Saturday.

ABBOTSFORD AIR SHOW ATTRACTS WAR ACE

RAF Air Vice-Marshal James (Johnnie) Johnson, the Second World War ace credited with downing 38 enemy aircraft, is to attend opening ceremonies at the Abbotsford International Air Show Friday.

The 52-year-old fighter pilot is on a reunion junket across Canada meeting the men who fought under him in a Canadian wing of three Spitfire squadrons.

Tuesday night in Toronto, Air Vice-Marshall Johnson said "Canada is like a second home to me. My wartime friendships are the most valuable of all to me, and I visit my Canadian friends often."

Tonight in Vancouver, Spitfire pilots are to gather with their former commander who will see the only Spitfire still licensed to fly in North America when he travels to Abbotsford Friday.

The Abbotsford field will be closed to private aircraft during performances of the three-day show and Victorians planning to fly over will have to work a careful schedule.

Described by organizers as the largest annual air show in North America, it drew 316,000 spectators last year.

Show times are Friday, 1 to 5 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday 10 a.m. to noon and 12:45 to 5:15 p.m. During these hours, private aircraft will not be permitted to land.

Some flypasts are scheduled Friday, but emphasis will be on 50 air industry exhibits.

Weekend shows will include performances by the RCAF Red Knight stunt pilot, the RAF Falcon parachute team and the Spitfire.

Montreal Gives Sex Education To 5-Year-Olds

MONTREAL (CP) — A sex education program complete with explicit slides and little-boy dolls will be introduced at the kindergarten level in five suburban schools this fall.

The program is part of an over-all course on health and human development which the South Shore Protestant Regional School Board is providing in kindergarten and Grade 1, and which has been approved by parents who were previously consulted.

"Doctors and psychologists agree that the age of five is a good time to start explaining the life process," said R. G. Smith, director of elementary schools for the board, in an interview. "But somehow no one gets around to it until later."

The thinking behind the venture, he said, is that the age of puberty is far too late to teach children about sex.

"At that stage there are all kinds of awkward difficulties and the youngster has preconceived and emotional ideas."

The sex education program is to be part of a larger one dealing with cleanliness, safety, nutrition, social and emotional health; exercise and recreation, dental hygiene, sleep and rest, control of disease and vision conservation.

To explain the life process to children, teachers will use visual aids such as aquariums and incubators and the little-boy dolls.

A set of explicit slides will be interspersed throughout the year's program.

Mr. Smith said the parents of the 400 children involved in the project have asked for a parallel adult education course so they can "find out what it is we are teaching their kids."

"Some parents are already doing a good job of telling their children," said Mr. Smith. "All we want to do is provide some background."

"But for those who can't tell their children, we'll be able to help out a bit."

One of the biggest problems which might be encountered during the course relates to foster children, said Mr. Smith.

Most of the books and slides produced for five-year-olds lay heavy stress on family closeness and parents' love.

Mr. Smith said this particular problem would be worked out with individual parents if the case arose.

He stressed that teachers have never dodged sex questions in the classroom. "Actually all we're doing is legalizing what happens right now."

Gladys Lennox, co-ordinator of school health services in charge of the program, says it is probably the first of its kind to receive approval by a regional school board.

Schools selected on an experimental basis are Jubilee and Royal George in Greenfield Park, Kensington in St. Hubert, and St. Steven's and William Larter schools in Chamby.

BIG PARADE WITNESSED BY 35,000

KELowna (CP) — More than 35,000 persons lined city streets Wednesday to watch the parade marking the opening of the 62nd annual Kelowna Regatta.

The 90-minute spectacle, which included 108 entries, filled by shirt-sleeve crowds in 80-degree weather.

Heading the parade were Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Premier Bennett.

Later, crowds watched the crowning of Marina Maundrell, 17, as Lady of the Lake.

Quebec to Ban Union Raiding

QUEBEC (CP) — Maurice Bellemare, Quebec labor minister, says he will introduce in the next session of the legislature a bill which would put an end to inter-union raiding and establish the worker's right to join the union of his choice.

Speaking to reporters Wednesday prior to a cabinet meeting, Mr. Bellemare said he decided to draw up such a bill after receiving the report of a committee representing the government, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, the Quebec Federation of Labor and other labor organizations.

The report, made public last week, established the broad outlines of a no-raiding pact acceptable to all unions involved in the committee's study of union problems.

"Now that the committee has made its report, the labor department will take a decision on it, and it will be along those lines that we will proceed in drawing up legislation for the next session," Mr. Bellemare said.

Earlier Wednesday, a delegation presented Jean-Jacques Bertrand—acting premier while Premier Daniel Johnson recuperates from a mild heart attack—with a petition asking the government to intervene in an inter-union dispute at a construction site in Baie Comeau, Que.

Four Pay Fines For Breaking Boat Regulations

Four men were fined Wednesday when they pleaded guilty to infractions of small vessel regulations.

Joseph Arsenault, 926 Gault, paid a $15 penalty for not having a sufficient number of life jackets in a boat owned and operated by him July 6. Ernest Jefferies, 101 View Royal was fined $15 on the same charge, dated July 1.

Both boats were operating in Esquimalt Harbor.

John Down, 363 Kinver, was fined $10 for not having a licence number marked on the bow of his boat operating in Victoria Harbor July 6.

Andrew Owens, 1607 Cook, was fined $5 on the same charge. Owens told the court the motor he usually used on his boat didn't require him to have a licence number on the bow. He said that on July 1, when he was charged, he was trying out a larger motor which he thought he might buy.

Pope Urges Personal Reform for Moderns

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (Reuters) — Pope Paul called on Roman Catholics Wednesday to reform themselves before trying to reform the church.

"Today this word reform is back in fashion and dominates the evolutionary and innovating processes of modern life," the Pope told pilgrims at his summer residence here.

"To change our own thoughts, our own tastes according to God's will, to correct our own defects, which we often extol as our principles and our qualities ... this is the reform which is required of us before any other."

B.C. Labor Helps In Grape Boycott

"Our people, including women and children, have been shot at and run over."

"One grower ran a 10-ton loaded truck through them and the men on the picket line."

"One man was crushed under the wheels. He can't walk."

"That is the price we are willing to pay to try and organize."

A 24-year-old union organizer said Wednesday night this is how it is today in the vineyards of California.

Tony Mendez, who lives in Delano and has worked in the fields since he was seven, was urging union support for a consumer boycott of all grapes to back the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (AFL-CIO).

The B.C. Federation of Labor, comprised of 300 union locals in B.C. with a membership of 136,000 persons, has pledged its full support for the consumer boycott and has circulated a pamphlet entitled Don't Buy Sour Grapes.

New Start Necessary, Court Says

A man who pleaded guilty July 31 to threatening to kill another man and who was to be sentenced Wednesday faced a surprise turn of events when he appeared in court.

Magistrate William Ostler told Clifford Jago, 24, of 967 North Park that his earlier election of trial by magistrate and plea of guilty was a "nulity."

Mr. Ostler said he had been informed by Crown prosecutor John Macintyre that the section of the criminal code under which the charge had been laid was out of the jurisdiction of a magistrates court and could only be heard by a Supreme Court Judge.

Therefore Jago was not guilty of any offence and the Crown must now decide how it wished to proceed in disposition of the case, said the magistrate.

Mr. Macintyre asked that the case be remanded until Friday. At this time the Crown can proceed with a preliminary hearing, or ask that the charge be withdrawn.

Double Winner

SASKATOON (CP)—The West Lorne, Ont., Sun was a double winner Wednesday in awards announced at the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association's convention. The Sun was named best newspaper in the under 1,000 circulation class and also won the prize for best editorial page. The West Vancouver Lions Gate Times won the community service award.

Gov't Clamping Down On Short Circuiting

New regulations have been issued by the government to stop some electrical contractors from short-circuiting certification procedures.

A cabinet order Wednesday approved a series of amendments to the requirements for obtaining a government certificate of competency needed to operate an electrical contracting business.

It included one change described as needed to "eliminate the practice, now fairly prevalent" of company taking on an inactive shareholder with the needed technical qualifications "merely to obtain a certificate in his name" for the firm.

The amendments also included a major revision transferring authority for examining electricians to the chief government inspector from the existing board of examiners.

The six-man board was re-established as a purely advisory body.

New eligibility requirements were set, under which applicants for a Class C electricians certificate must have at least two years experience before writing an examination, with three and four years experience respectively required to obtain the right to write examinations for the "B" and "A" certificates.

In another change, the regulations for the first time will set a minimum age for an applicant seeking an electrician's certificate — 18 years.

A report indicated some persons of "extreme youth" had been applying for certificates.

This advertisement is not published or displayed by the Liquor Control Board or by the Government of British Columbia.

Down with Cluny. (The De-light-fully Light Scotch)

Federation secretary Ray Haynes told the Victoria Labor Council that 95 to 100 per cent of the grapes sold in B.C. stores come from California.

Both he and Mr. Mendez said the large grape-growing corporations in California have been switching labels to such an extent it is not possible to know which grapes come from which company.

Mr. Mendez said 10 or 12 contracts have already been signed, including Schenley Industries and DeGiorgio, but the "hardest fight and the biggest one" is the three-year strike against the Guimarra corporation.

"Everyone who has tried to organize in the past was crushed," he said, going back to the early days of this century when the Industrial Workers of the World was active.

"We have been a little more successful this time. There are no laws covering farm workers and it is practically impossible to carry on the fight with the growers."

"We depend on contributions from the United States and Canada and the boycott."

REAGAN WITH GROWERS

The governor of California (Ronald Reagan) sides with the growers, saying we have no right to strike because we are in a perishable industry.

"When do they consider us as human beings? The average annual salary in the grape fields for a family of five or six averages $2,000 or $2,500. Yet the poverty level in the U.S. is $3,000."

"The profit is being swallowed by the corporations. We refuse to be treated like animals any more and we are going to get respect."

"We depend on labor to support our boycott. If labor does not help us, it will destroy us. If we lose the strike, no one else will be able to come near us. We'll be forgotten again, for 20 or 100 years."

In answer to questions, Mr. Mendez said there are no toilets in the fields and families live in shacks built in the 1930s. Growers pay their workers what they want to. There was no minimum wage for men.

Families too poor to keep their wives and children at home had to take them into the fields. Some children fell asleep and some had been killed by trucks running over them.

Mr. Haynes said the farm union organizing efforts reminded him of the labor troubles of the 1930s, when the industrial unions organized the big factories.

The farm workers are trying to organize the toughest industry, without any labor legislation," he said.

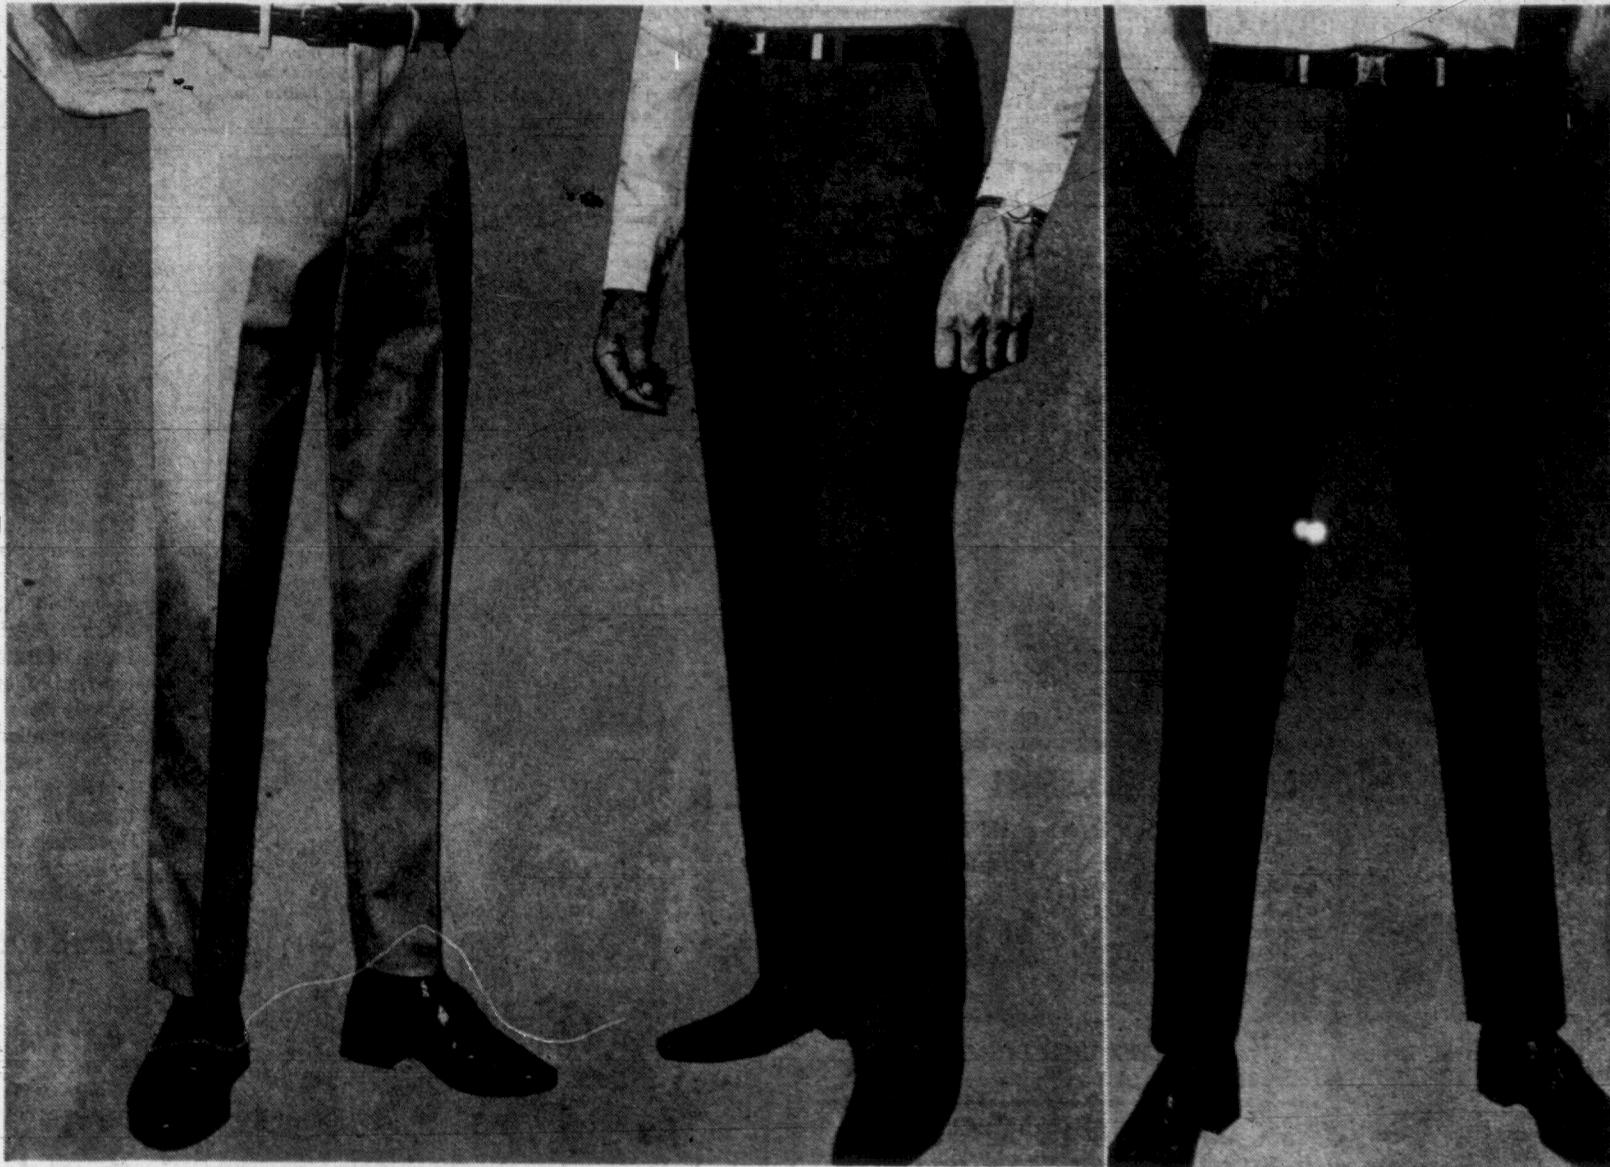

Last year the federation was able to "kick out" some non-union grapes sold in B.C. but, because of label switching, the federation had agreed to boycott all grapes in the province.

Arthur Mayse

Victoria planner Geoffrey J. Greenhaigh, quoted by Times City Hall Reporter Jim Hume in the first of an article series that merits thoughtful reading, suggests that it's up to the people to tell those who act for them what kind of an environment they wish.

Perhaps we should try Mr. Greenhaigh's on for size. What the typical family wants is first, a nice modern place in which to live. It should have schools not too far away, a well-stocked shopping centre within easy reach, and plenty of green space around it to provide elbowroom for growing children.

Take these ingredients of the good life, run them through a computer, along with such factors as expected population increase, and we would come up with not one but two solutions.

The first calls for an approximation, on Saanich Peninsula, of New York State's high-income Westchester area — obviously not the correct answer in an area of modest rather than spectacular average income.

The second brings us smack up against the high-rise circle with its main floor or basement shopping malls, and its parkland approximation of the old-time village green.

Is this the answer? Perhaps in part . . . but not for the families flooding into one of earth's two most favored sectors! (The other, I'm told, is the Kenya Highlands.)

Nope. What they want is precisely what they are getting, at the expense of the peninsula's steadily-dwindling farmlands. This is a house on a lot they can afford.

So here we are, all tied in a knot and back on the planners' doorstep looking for a way out of the dilemma.

This suggests to me that very much more than what we want is involved here. The issue narrows down to what we can realistically expect to have; and in this matter of mastering our environment, I think we should be getting less talk and more action from those we elect to govern us.

To date in Greater Victoria's post-war expansion, the chief planner has been the realtor. If you doubt this, go walk about among the buckshot subdivisions.

We should be grabbing green-belts, and generous ones, from the realtor's path, because such oases represent the only portions of this peninsula that can possibly be retained in their verdant state.

As for the remainder, it is going to fill up, just as Vancouver-oriented bedroom suburbs have straggled out along the Fraser Valley.

But I don't feel this fact should give cause for a wringing of official hands. There are, after all, other areas within easy reach of Victoria.

If you are a recent arrival, it may have occurred to you that we are insular in these parts to a degree that taxes belief. We have this peninsula complex, and against all reason, we refuse to get out from under it.

From where I sit, I can look out to Sooke Hills that will one day be inhabited surely as North and West Vancouver have toiled street by street up their mountain slopes.

Go out to the Douglas Street centres any weekend and you will find Duncan families busy at their shopping. We consider Duncan and the Cowichan Valley outside our sphere because the Malahat comes between. But the people up there don't!

A city should be proud of its potential, not afraid of it.

I'm not sure that the leaders of a proud city should ask the residents what they'd like done, any more than a doctor would ask a patient to diagnose his ills and prescribe for them.

The point is that whatever we, or most of us, might want for the south Island may have very little bearing on what we get. It is for government and its experts to analyze, project, and tell us how we can best turn the fact of change to our advantage.

If they can do that, and if action follows, expanded population might prove to be more of boon than blight.

A SWEET SIX-SOME from Clallam County, Wash., these young ladies arrived in Victoria this morning on a goodwill tour. The girls, 17 and 18 years old, are competing for the title of Miss Clallam County on the Olympic Peninsula, which includes Port Angeles. The girls are: Cheryl Gorss, Miss Leah Bay; Cheryl Bryson, Miss Forks; Pamela Berry, Miss Joyce; Chrys Casner, Miss Port Angeles; Cheryl Dianius, Miss Clallam Bay, and Pamela Li; Lington, Miss Sequim. The winner will be chosen Aug. 23.—(Times Photo)

Period of Dissent Favors Nixon Bid For White House

By DON VIPOND

Richard Nixon will win the American presidency but will bring little change to U.S. domestic and foreign policies.

This is the prediction of Dr. Robert Presthus, chairman of the department of political science at Toronto's York University and a summer sessions lecturer at the University of Victoria.

With a master's degree from the University of Minnesota and a doctorate from the University of Chicago, Dr. Presthus is close to the American political scene.

"As a result, he's had to go around advocating policies that are really not his own . . . I doubt he really has his heart in the Vietnam policy."

Humphrey's problem now is to detach himself from Johnson and overcome the fairly widespread belief that he doesn't have any policy of his own.

Dr. Presthus doesn't think there's time to do the job before the election in November.

"We allow these problems to almost become emergencies."

LOST CONFIDENCE

Another factor is "the credibility gap." This means simply that "a lot of people have lost confidence in Johnson and the Democratic administration."

Finally, says Dr. Presthus, he believes there is a sort of cyclical effect in American politics where many voters think the country should change parties occasionally.

"There's a time-for-a-change psychology right now."

One of the ironies of a Nixon win is that "I don't think he's going to do things any differently."

"Ever since Dien Bien Phu he has advocated an escalation of the Vietnam conflict and he is speaking similarly right now."

"And at home, with the Negroes in the cities, like many of the top-level Republicans he's a law-and-order man. By that, I think he believes we need firmer measures — riot control training, respect for property."

Many people believe this is what brought the problem on."

Dr. Presthus classifies Nixon as a strong candidate, intelligent and articulate. And he thinks he will beat Hubert Humphrey, who he says has the Democratic presidential nomination sewn up.

The vice-president is suffering

10 Stores To Locate In Arcade

A-1 Holding Co., owner of the Beverley Hotel at 724 Yates, today provided details of a commercial-pedestrian arcade being built between Yates and Johnson.

There will be 10 stores at ground level in the pedestrian way leading off Yates through the hotel and into an enclosed court, connected in turn by a walk opening onto Johnson.

The project is backed by the International Development Bank and is part of a renovation program to improve the Beverley Hotel.

Yates Passage will be the name, taken from a French designation for arcades and quite common in Europe, the company said.

But the Victoria version will have a Japanese feature in that each store will be open at the front, protected after hours by a steel grille that will be drawn across, while permitting passersby to look in.

Pat Bay Widening In Fall

MLA Certain Work to Start

Saanich MLA John Tisdalle today forecast an autumn start on the widening of Pat Bay Highway to four lanes.

Mr. Tisdalle said he could not reveal details of talks he has had with Highways Minister Wesley Black.

"But I am not living just on hope," said Mr. Tisdalle.

He said surveys are already under way for highway access roads all through the Saanich peninsula.

ROUTE TRAFFIC

"This will enable them to reroute traffic when they start work."

The MLA said he expects there "will be work in evidence on the road to the Victoria end this fall."

Negotiations with private landowners are now proceeding but it is not possible yet to outline the actual route where it deviates from the existing two-lane highway, said Mr. Tisdalle.

He said his confidential discussions with the minister have also covered the need for widening the Trans-Canada Highway to four lanes between Victoria and Goldstream and "right over the Malahat."

TOO MANY DEATHS'

Mr. Tisdalle said, "There are far too many deaths on both these highways." He thought those sections of the Trans-Canada where there are now three lanes — a centre lane for passing — are especially dangerous.

"And on the Pat Bay Highway people must drive with their insurance policies in their pockets." He was grateful that many motorists now recognize the hazard caused by heavy traffic and they are driving "in a cagey manner."

NECESSARY IN 1962?

He said the traffic explosion is worse than the population explosion in the priority of problems facing this area.

The widening of Patric Bay Highway has been far too long on the drawing boards. I was disappointed that it wasn't done in 1962. It was necessary then.

"Eager to maintain his position, he petitioned the first city council for a licence to continue under a city contract.

FACE $500 FINE

Offenders face a fine of up to $500 and can be held responsible for the cost of fighting fires they start, officials said.

Altogether 22 new fires were reported overnight in the province, bringing the total burning today to 143.

Fire hazard in the district is rated as high.

URGENT APPEAL

The forest service has issued an urgent appeal for caution in the woods after six new fires, including two on the Island, were reported in the Vancouver forest district.

Officials warned that legal action would be taken against persons caught disobeying a ban on campfires in the district, which includes the lower mainland, the Island and the Gulf Islands.

Three of the new fires were blamed on smokers and one was caused by children playing with matches.

MINOR REBUILDING

Major Derek Bamford, second-in-command at the army base, said the Queen's Own Rifles are going ahead doing minor rebuilding and other repairs on the assumption they will be stationed at Work point for some time.

"We've been told we'll be here for the foreseeable future," he said, adding that he didn't have any more precise idea of what that meant than anyone else.

"It's possible that in five years' time we won't be here," he said. "We're hopeful we'll be here for quite a while."

Loss of the Queen's Own regiment — recently boosted to a strength of 700 men by addition of 100 from Calgary — would be a serious economic blow to the Victoria area.

WON'T REPLACE JOBS

Proper development of the surplus land could be a shot in the arm for the area, but it would hardly produce enough jobs to cancel out the payroll losses and related losses in employment in the trade and service sectors of the economy here.

Mr. Bryant paid tribute to the contribution made by the Queen's Own Rifles and their families to the community life and said their continued residence here was a welcome prospect.

There is speculation a change in timetable for phasing out the Work Point centre may be related to the continuing need for Canada's role as an international peacekeeper.

Mr. Bryant said defence officials had been co-operative in preliminary talks giving rise to hope that the municipality would be given serious consideration when the property became available.

Work Point was established as headquarters for army detachments in B.C. in 1887 when C Battery from Kingston arrived to take up residence. It had earlier housed an artillery battery.

The Queen's Own moved into Work Point in 1963, taking over from the Princess Pats.

tion," he says. "But somewhere there is an answer and we have to find it.

"The automobile, when it was first introduced, was a great blessing. It gave people an option as to where they could live. Whereas before they had been forced to live close to their work, the automobile made it possible for the people to live in the country and work in the city.

"It gave us the option as to where we could live and now by its tremendous volume it is taking that option away from us.

"The automobile makes it possible for people to live well away from the centre of the city, but to come downtown to shop, dine or go to the theatre.

BUT SO GREAT ARE THE DEMANDS OF THE AUTOMOBILE FOR PARKING SPACE

"It may well be that the future we shall, reluctantly, have to restrict some of the freedoms the motorist now has," says Mayor Stephen.

"In London, England, the authorities are already considering instituting a system of toll roads to make it too expensive to take an automobile into the heart of the city.

"It may surprise some people, but I have always recognized the fact that the centre of Victoria must stay vibrant, strong and attractive," he says.

"It is important to the entire region that downtown Victoria stays that way. We in Saanich regard it as our 'downtown' too, you know.

"Like Mayor Stephen I can see the day when we shall have to make it too expensive to take the family car downtown.

"Possibly we shall have to insist that the automobile be left at the city limits with some sort of mass transit moving in and out of the city centre.

"I don't think this area will ever be suited to the accepted forms of rapid transportation

Firefighters Mopping-Up Area Blaze

Firefighters today are mopping up the 150-acre forest fire on the north shoulder of Mount Finlayson they brought under control late Wednesday, B.C. Forest Service reports.

The fire, which broke out Sunday night, is reported completely under guard.

Firelines on the steep mountainside along Finlayson Arm opposite Malahat Drive, are still manned by 165 men.

Two Canoe water bombers, a helicopter and seven bulldozers were used Wednesday in the battle.

Campfires are blamed for starting two fires overnight on Vancouver Island. Cause of the Mount Finlayson fire has not been determined.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Family Shower Gift Places Mom on Rack

By PENNY SAVER

My article last Friday on spices gave one of my neighbors an idea for a shower gift. She had started out in a rather complicated position. Her niece is to be married soon and she had been invited to a kitchen shower. All of my neighbor's children were excited at the thought of Cousin Mary becoming a bride and all wanted to make some contribution to the gift. "I had been wondering for days how to make each contribution seem as important as possible," my neighbor reported. "Then, when I saw your article I realized that each youngster could afford to buy one bottle of spice. This way each child could point out a definite gift that was 'mine' instead of 'ours.' I supplied the rack to hold them."

The rack she chose for her niece is quite plain and made of sherry wood, finished in a medium shade. It has two tiers and is large enough to hold 12 apothecary bottles. This model rack costs $2.95. "The spices from the children filled one tier, which means Mary can fill the other with her pet spices," my neighbor said. "My strategy must have been a success since Mary was so pleased." A single tier rack that holds six bottles is $1.95 while a three tier rack (18 bottles) is $3.95. These same racks can be bought with empty apothecary bottles with stopper tops for those who like to keep their spices in bulk. With bottles a one tier rack is $2.95; two tier, $3.95, and three tier, $6.95.

Books Find Work for Idle Handymen

Handyman fathers like to raise handyman sons but one woman I know feels overburdened with both. All the odd jobs around home are done as quick as can be, and so well that reminders are as rare as can be. In consequence she has two bored and out-of-work handymen constantly looking for something to do. Then she had a veritable brainwave. She bought them a $2.35 book full of one evening projects. Now her only problem is finding room for the things her handymen have made.

The senior handyman thought these books were a wonderful idea. As well as the one evening projects there is a general project book, both complete with patterns. These, he found, gave junior needed practice at following a pattern so he began to investigate the other books in the series. There is a list of books on "How To Get The Most Out Of . . ." almost any tool you can name. (Not being a carpenter myself I won't even try to give the list.) In addition there is an excellent book on the subject of finishing that gave even the senior handyman a few tips on what can be done with wood.

Robert Frost said "Something there is that does not love a wall." Everything balances. Now there is something that loves walls of brick, stone or concrete. A company, well-known for its quick and easy plaster patching compound has produced a similar product for patching masonry. It bonds permanently to concrete, stone or brick. It will mend cracks in anything from a birdbath to a swimming pool, and is strong enough to be shaped — even into a sharp corner that won't crumble or crack. A powder, it is easy to mix and use. A five-pound package, the only size available so far, costs $2.69.

If you would like to know where these items may be found, please call me at 382-3131.

Tests Tree Twigs As Summer Job

OTTAWA (CP) — A 21-year-old co-ed with a scientific bent is holed up in a sterilized little room on the Carleton University campus testing elm tree twigs.

Although Jill Taylor doesn't find her summer job glamorous, it is necessary. Dutch elm disease, traces of which her detective work turns up, is literally choking many of the capital's majestic elms.

The disease, spread by bark beetles, develops into a fungus that blocks off the tree's entire food system as it feeds and spreads.

Miss Taylor's work is sponsored by the city and the National Capital Commission which is responsible for much of the capital's parkland.

"People should be very careful about the disease," Miss Taylor said. "It is really wise to have elm trees checked."

To test for the disease, she strips back the bark on a sample twig and cuts out small chips from the wood using a hunting knife.

The chips are placed in a prepared culture, covered, and left 10 days.

If the fungus has multiplied to a readily distinguishable form in that time, Miss Taylor makes a last check under the microscope for the football-shaped fungus spores.

Delicious Cheese Bread Treat

While there are still a couple of slices of it left I want to describe one of the best cheese breads I have ever made.

We're having guests two evenings in succession so I made a loaf for two meals, by making a dozen rolls. Moore for the first one and a lovely round loaf for the second.

CHEESE BREAD

(1 loaf and 12 rolls or 2 loaves)

One package granular yeast, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1/2 cup lukewarm water, 1 cup scalded milk, 1/4 cup cold water, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar (second amount), 2 teaspoons salt, 2 cups (8 oz.) Gouda cheese, 6 cups sifted all-purpose flour.

In large mixing bowl combine yeast and 1 teaspoon sugar, and gently pour on lukewarm water and let soak 10 minutes. To scalded milk add cold water, butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons sugar and the salt. Cool to lukewarm.

Add to yeast mixture along with the shredded Gouda cheese and 3 cups of the flour and beat together thoroughly. Add 2 more cups sifted flour. Reserve remaining 1 cup for flouring board.

Knead on lightly floured board until velvet smooth.

using up about half of the remaining 1 cup flour.

Return to scraped down greased bowl and let rise covered until more than doubled. (Mine required 3 hours at room temperature.)

Turn out on board floured with remaining 1/2 cup flour and knead 200 times.

For two loaves divide in half, shape into loaves and place in buttered round or oblong loaf pans. Butter tops, cover with towel and let rise until doubled.

Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 45 to 50 minutes.

For 1 loaf and 12 rolls, divide into 2 parts, one a little larger than the other. Shape smaller piece into a long even roll under your palms, cut into 12 even pieces, shape into balls and place in buttered 2 1/2" muffin tins. Brush with beaten egg. Shape remaining dough into loaf shape and place in large buttered round or oblong pan. If needed for following day cover and refrigerate overnight. Let rolls rise until well above rims of muffin pans and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 minutes.

If you have refrigerated one loaf be sure to remove from refrigerator three hours before baking time to warm up and rise until doubled. Bake as above.

If desired chilled loaf may be brushed with beaten egg when removed from refrigerator to give it an attractive gold crust when baked.

Reform Economists Demanding Reduction Of Women in Czechoslovakia's Work Force

By PETER BUCKLEY

PRAGUE (CP) — Women of Czechoslovakia, beware! A leading economist says, with disarming bluntness: "We have too many women in our economy."

To which a Czech woman journalist replied later: "It's not possible to make an economic reform here and throw the women into the street."

The slightly exasperated women's view of the current economic and political reform in Czechoslovakia came at a recent meeting with members of a publishing house run by the Czechoslovak Women's Union at the opulent 18th century mansion they use as editorial headquarters.

Chief spokesman was Zdenka Zimova, a grey-haired, motherly woman who is editor of a quarterly magazine called Czechoslovak Woman which circulates abroad in five languages.

UPHEAVAL DUE

Mrs. Zimova was not prepared to accept the economist's view of the future for working women in a Czechoslovak society which is likely to be radically transformed in the months and years to come.

"As a whole, we have a shortage of labor in Czechoslovakia," Mrs. Zimova said. "The new economic changes will surely affect not only women but the whole working population."

"We must close down unprofitable old factories and transfer the workers to different branches of industry. It will undoubtedly be a painful process, but it concerns only certain sectors of society."

BLAMES THE PAST

"It's true that the new factories won't be able to use unqualified workers, and it's also true that there are many unqualified women. For this you can blame the past."

"When they were building heavy industry in Czechoslovakia, they wanted and recruited women for light industry. The women came mainly from the households and were largely unqualified. However, many of them have gained their qualification since."

Although not noticeably quick to react when the reform movement began late last year, Czechoslovakia's women have been caught up in the changes. Their leaders seem prepared to take advantage of the deep-seated reforms instigated by Communist party leader Alexander Dubcek and his supporters.

"The situation here is not as

MOSTLY UNSKILLED

Forty-six per cent of the Czech working population are women. But the visitor is most likely to be struck by the fact that the great majority of street-sweepers, store clerks, streetcar conductors and other such unskilled workers are women.

"The situation here is not as it is in the Soviet Union, where many women occupy high places in industry and medicine and education," said dark-haired, attractive Marta Vaisova, one of the publishing house's staff writers.

"We have many highly qualified women in Czechoslovakia but the old habits prevail. The women's union has an important job to do to improve the situation."

VIEWS CLASH

Special commissions have been set up to remodel the union's constitution, make its membership more democratic and reshape its objectives. Among other things, the union is likely to take a more active, questioning role in politics and to demand that government ministries consult it more closely on laws and regulations which affect women.

1. Married women with no real interest in a career frequently took advantage of the government's pledge to provide work—and a salary—for all who wanted it. The result had often been "make-work" employment for women, which contributed little to the over-all economy, as well as a weed-like spread of bureaucracy.

2. Women tended to be more conservative by nature and were more likely to resist the changes

PM'S BARBER EXPLAINS HAIRSTYLE

OTTAWA (CP) — Maybe the reason editorial cartoonists frequently caricature the prime minister with a garland of laurel leaves around his head is that he has a sculptured haircut.

At least that's what his Ottawa barber, Robert Barton, calls it.

Mr. Trudeau, he says, patronizes his shop every three weeks for a wash, cut and sculpturing.

"He's losing his hair on top," Mr. Barton said, "so we try to fill the spots."

Mr. Barton perfected the prime minister's hair style six months ago when the then Justice minister first began to visit his shop. The hair on one side was swept towards the face, the other side following its natural line to the neck.

All Mr. Barton's "sculptured cuts" follow basically the same procedure, starting with shaping by an extremely fine electric razor and ending with combing and spraying.

Irish Visitor

Mrs. Reginald McKinley of Belfast has been spending some time in Victoria visiting relatives, including her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Curtisby at View Royal. She is at present the guest of Mrs. Frederick Parkinson of Sidney. Mrs. McKinley leaves Saturday to return to Ireland, after visiting other members of her family in Vancouver and Edmonton en route.

From Rossland

Mr. Barry Roome of Rossland, B.C., is in Victoria visiting his parents, Major and Mrs. F. C. E. Roome of Timber Place. He is accompanied by his daughters, Joya and Diane. Mr. Roome, a teacher, will be here until the school year begins.

(MONTREAL J & J)

Of course, tampons have been around for a long time but no real improvements have been made in them for some 20 years.

Now, Johnson & Johnson introduces its new CAREFREE Tampon. It's an entirely new kind of tampon—much smaller than any tampon ever made, yet amazingly, it offers longer lasting protection—up to 3 hours longer than any other tampon.

This greater absorbency results from a unique quality. While the traditional tampon expands lengthwise, the CAREFREE Tampon expands logically enough, in width—as the flow requires. This gentle expansion causes the tampon to mould itself to the body contours so it's accident-proof.

Another remarkable feature of CAREFREE Tampon is that it is truly disposable. No more rigid cardboard tube; there's just a neat, compact tampon in a cellophane wrapper.

Complete assurance

Exhaustive clinical tests and actual use among 3,720 women have proven that CAREFREE Tampons can be worn, with complete assurance, even during days when the flow is heaviest.

And the CAREFREE Tampon is made of pure surgical rayon. This type of rayon was developed by Johnson & Johnson and only Johnson & Johnson uses it. It has a high crimp and its long fibers interlock. This results in higher absorbency. And the tampon holds its shape, too!

New CAREFREE Tampons are truly disposable

The cumbersome applicator that you get with ordinary tampons is completely unnecessary with new CAREFREE Tampon.

Safe up to 3 hours longer

Now, Johnson & Johnson has developed CAREFREE, the most absorbent, the most reliable tampon ever made. CAREFREE is, in fact, safe for up to 3 hours longer than any other tampon.

CAREFREE is also the smallest tampon there is—so small you can hide one in the palm of your hand. So small you can put a box in your most fashionable bag and still have room for all that you usually carry. (A whole box of CAREFREE Tampons takes up no more room than a small pack of cigarettes.)

Once they've tried CAREFREE Tampons women are quick to recognize their many great advantages. They're the only significant improvement in sanitary protection in years.

Free trial

We'll send you—free—a package of 10 new CAREFREE Tampons in a plain envelope, addressed to you personally. Write to Anne Gilbert, Personal Products Division, Johnson & Johnson, 2155 Pie IX Blvd., Montreal 4, Que., and state whether you wish the Super or Regular absorbency. One offer only per person.

We'll also send you a factual and detailed leaflet on this happy innovation.

Annual Dinner

Dr. Tom McLester, new president of the Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club, will head the table at the men's annual dinner to be held this Saturday at 7:30 in the clubhouse.

To The Netherlands

The women will also have to work hard to convince the reform economists. Many of the men now shaping the new Czech reforms believe the number of women workers can and should be reduced.

One of them gave me two main reasons:

1. Married women with no real interest in a career frequently took advantage of the government's pledge to provide work—and a salary—for all who wanted it. The result had often been "make-work" employment for women, which contributed little to the over-all economy, as well as a weed-like spread of bureaucracy.

2. Women tended to be more conservative by nature and were more likely to resist the changes

DEAR ABBY . . .*Childish Man Tells Friends 'Everything'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good man in many ways, but he has one terrible fault which I think is inexcusable. He "tells all" (and I do mean all) to his men friends.

I feel that we have no intimate husband-wife secrets like other married couples. My husband tells guys he's not even known very long everything that goes on between us. I know he has because he's told me so.

Knowing that all his men friends know all those intimate things about me, I can't face them.

What is the matter with a man who acts like this? I have grown cold toward him, and we've only been married two years. Do you blame me?

COLD WIFE

DEAR COLD: Either your husband is very immature or he thinks he's invented something. Your talkative husband is "telling all" to the wrong people. If he can't keep his mouth shut, he should lie down on a couch, and tell it to a psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent divorcee, and as such, most men take me for an "easy mark." They all ask the same question, "What do you have to lose?"

I am in my late thirties, and I'm certainly not a child. But what is a good answer for these eager beavers? The word "NO" doesn't seem to mean anything to them. They want to know WHY! Please give me a good answer.

INDIANA READER

DEAR READER: Just say, "NO—that's not my style..."

Lines Around the Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly to the skin becomes smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying 2nd Debut massage very lightly, it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

Total Trailer Ban Sought By Cowichan

NORTH COWICHAN—Having been taken by surprise by one application for a trailer court, North Cowichan council Wednesday frantically sought ways to impose a total ban on trailers in the municipality.

The total ban would be until such time as a professional study is made concerning the effect of trailer court installations on the public health.

Council's action follows a mass protest by adjoining residents to a trailer court being established at Quamichan Lake.

But because council was caught napping the municipal office has been obliged to issue a building permit to Ed Court of Victoria for two auxiliary buildings in connection with the establishment of 15 trailer homes on 15 acres of land at Quamichan Lake.

Council unanimously decided to advertise and convene a rezoning hearing for early next week.

Meantime the municipal solicitor is to be consulted to determine if the permit already issued to Mr. Court can be held up until the study of Quamichan Lake is undertaken.

Council also passed a resolution to approach the B.C. Research Council for advice on who should make the pollution study of the lake.

Recommendations of the rezoning hearing are to be considered by council "as early as legally possible."

Ald. George Whitaker said the Quamichan Lake trailer project was in effect stopped as he could not see the applicant going ahead with only 15 units.

Mr. Court said this morning: "I have not made up my mind."

Mayor Donald Morton said at the outset of the council meeting they were adopting unusual procedure in trying to rezone hurriedly to ban trailers and trailer courts from rural residential areas and make existing use non-conforming.

He said: "A total ban sounds a bit rough."

Mayor Morton said, "The trouble is everyone thinks

300 Workers Walk Off Job At Port Alberni

POR T ALBERNI—About 300 employees of the Sproat Lake logging division of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., walked off the job today in a dispute over working conditions.

The men are seeking extra money for working in an area hit by a forest fire last summer.

A company offer of 10 cents an hour extra has been rejected by the men.

trailer courts are fine—if they're somewhere else."

He said he had taken the responsibility Tuesday of not denying the permit for the two auxiliary buildings which were approved by the health authorities.

Mayor Morton said he wished to emphasize that Mr. Court's plans as submitted to council showed no more than 15 trailers despite previous reports of as many as 220 units.

Ald. Margaret Robertson said it was her intention to stop further trailer development, especially close to a domestic water reservoir (Quamichan Lake).

Mayor Morton said the importance of speed in convening the rezoning hearing and subsequent approval of a bylaw was because he did not know if they could at present halt Mr. Court adding to his plan for 15 units.

He said it was only right he should inform council of two more inquiries from people wishing to establish trailer courts in the Quamichan Lake area.

The building inspector had told the applicants of the possible rezoning and said they would be proceeding at their own risk.

Mayor Morton said: "They have had fair warning."

He added, "Any undue haste on our part to convene a rezoning hearing will not meet with unanimous approval."

"We might meet with strong opposition."

"We're saying in effect, that we are finding the question of trailer courts difficult to handle and want to ban them until we have had the whole area looked at professionally and the government finds some means of taxing them."

Mayor Morton said he understood the deputy minister of health had concerned himself with the Court application and has laid down that any effluent must be dumped 700 feet from the lake shore.

In a last word, Mayor Morton said the result of a professional study of Quamichan Lake regarding pollution might be that existing properties might require to correct their septic tank situations and the trailer court be given the green light.

LADYSMITH—Janice Fair, 12, suffered a possible broken leg or ankle in a fall here Wednesday and was to be X-rayed in hospital today.

Janice was playing with friends at Holland Creek when a wire fence on which she was climbing collapsed and she went crashing down a steep bank.

Ladysmith ambulance was called but the bank was too steep for the men to be able to get a stretcher down to Janice. She was carried up by two RCMP constables linking their arms to make a "chair."

Janice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Fair of Malone Road, Ladysmith.

A court date has not yet been set.

The two vessels struck head-on, and the Canadian Coast Guard reported the prow of the freighter was embedded in the tanker's starboard hull, 50 feet aft of the bow, and broke off.

Both vessels proceeded toward Seattle under their own power, but the tanker was reported making slow headway, under escort of a tug. Neither ship was taking on water.

The collision was off Estevan Point just after noon.

The freighter, a van ship owned by Sea-Land Freight Service, Inc., was expected at Seattle, her home port, today.

SPCA to Charge Owner of Horses

POR T ALBERNI—The SPCA laid charges Wednesday against the owner of 11 horses taken into custody at Long Beach after reports that the animals were not being properly cared for.

SPCA inspector Frank Dalby said the charge is failing unlawfully and wilfully to provide adequate shelter, water and food for the animals.

The horses, which were being rented out for trail rides at the beach on the Island's west coast, now are stabled here.

A court date has not yet been set.

The man and woman were seen in the area of the accident.

Both vessels suffered broken ribs.

The Mando II and the Suwahara Maru were abandoned and the Transoneida stood by after taking off the crews.

No specific sum for salvage is asked.

Bernard Shafter of New York, representing heirs of five of the 11 Mandol crewmen killed in the collision or fire which followed, asks $1,000,000 from the Hellenic International Shipping Co., owner of the Mandol.

U.S. Oil and Refining Co., owner of the Mandol's cargo, asks $1,000,000 from Yamashita Shinshiro Kisen, owner of the Suwahara Maru.

And the vessels' owners trade claims. The Mandol's owners seek $2,850,000 and the Suwahara Maru's owners seek $2,560,000.

Additionally, Island Tug and Barge has a towing claim but it is not on file in district court here.

The owner of each of the vessels has filed papers seeking to limit their liability. The limit of $1,108,000, and has filed a bond in that amount.

TIPS FOR GARDENERS

Sharp Jolt Has Results

By HILDA BEASTALL

A sharp jolt often has good results. It tends to straighten our backbones with a jerk which sets the brain working more clearly.

Speaking to a gardener during the week about Scarlet Runner beans failing to set pods, a picture suddenly came to mind of verandas in southern Florida draped with these vines.

It would be winter there, January, and the scarlet bean blossoms were just another scarlet flower in a landscape where reds predominated against the incredible green shades of luxuriant winter vegetation.

But never a bean pod was seen on those vines. "What do you do with the bean pods?" I asked. "Never seen any," came the reply.

At the time I wondered vaguely why, but since then have noticed every hot climate garden book speaks of Scarlet Runner bean vine as a decorative trellis climber, never as an edible crop bearer.

From this knowledge it should have been a simple step to solving the problem of gardeners here who fail to have pods set on their Scarlet Runners in summers which rack up a few temperatures above 75 degrees.

It rather startles me to think how many years it has taken to penetrate. We have been advised to spray the bean flowers with water at the end of hot days. This lowers the temperature and encourages setting of pods. The flowers are self-pollinating so insects are not involved.

Gardeners near salt water or in cooler areas where temperatures have barely risen to 70 degrees will not experience this difficulty with beans.

TRAFFIC on a main street in Fall River, Mass., suffered a busy hour tieup recently when mother duck and her six ducklings decided to pay a visit. After casual stroll mother and offspring ended up at Animal Rescue League headquarters. They were returned to more appropriate surroundings. (AP Wirephoto.)

U.S. SCHOOL TESTS

Ghetto Children Suffer

NEW YORK (CP)—Who are the Dixie Hummingbirds? Who did Stagger Lee kill? What's a blood?

These are the sort of questions that may help correct imbalances in intelligence tests now given in many North American schools.

Many teachers are convinced the present tests are heavily weighted against children who are culturally deprived—the polite euphemism for children growing up in slums.

They say that children from white, middle-class backgrounds are much more likely to do well on most intelligence tests—not because they are any brighter than poor children but because their backgrounds equip them better to answer the sort of questions on the tests.

For instance, middle-class children are more likely to know what a sonata is than their classmates from underprivileged backgrounds.

The above questions are examples on a test designed for ghetto children, who might be expected to know that the Dixie Hummingbirds are a modern gospel group, that a man called a blood is a Negro and that Stagger Lee, in the popular song, killed Billy. DEvised BY NEGRO

They are contained on a test devised by Adrian Dove, a sociologist and a United States government worker in Washington and himself a Negro.

The test, now being circulated on an informal basis, is known as the Dove Counterbalance General Intelligence Test and is a 30-question, multiple-choice examination.

Dove says he designed the test as a "kind of half-serious way of proving the point that we're not really measuring intelligence."

"People were failing employment and intelligence tests, not because they were stupid, but because the test was geared to middle-class white society."

Some other examples from the test:

B. Diddley is a . . .

(a) game for children; (b) a porter; (c) down home singer; (d) new dance; (e) Moe Joe call.

Jet is . . .

(a) an East Oakland motorcycle club; (b) one of the gangs in West Side Story; (c) a news and gossip magazine; (d) a way of life for the very rich.

A "handkerchief head" is . . .

(a) a cool eat; (b) a porter; (c) and Uncle Tom; (d) a hoddie; (e) a preacher.

If you throw the dice and seven is showing on the top, what is facing down?

(a) seven; (b) snake eyes; (c) boxcars; (d) little Joes; (e) 11.

Dief Visions Collected In New Mao-Type Satire

REGINA (CP) — A collection of pronouncements by former Progressive Conservative leader John Diefenbaker has gone on sale here in a paperback called Quotations from Chairman Diefenbaker. The book's preface urges people to "study the chairman's writings, follow his teachings and act according to his instructions."

The scarlet cover of the small-sized, 160-page volume bears a cameo photograph of the former prime minister scowling and flocked in a jacket styled after the type made popular by Chairman Mao Tse-tung of China. The prefatory exhortation is a quote from Lin Piao, deputy premier of China. Curtis Publishing Co. of Can-

Bond Posted For Behavior

A man who pleaded guilty Monday in attempting to commit suicide was given a suspended sentence Wednesday and placed on a $250 six-month good behavior bond.

Court was told that Gordon Sillars, 711 Johnsoncon, was arrested by Saanich police Saturday night after a fire broke out at the home of his estranged wife and was later found hanging by his own shirt from a bar in the station cells.

He was unconscious and purple in the face when taken from the lock-up to the hospital. Sillars said he could not remember anything of the incident.

ada has distributed to 8,000 outlets across Canada 20,000 copies of the book, which was researched and produced by Anthony Bond, a writer, and Brian Shaw, a literary agent, both of Toronto. It was published in mid-July by Greywood Publishing Limited of Winnipeg and sells for $1 a copy.

Greywood publisher Richard Bonnycastle said in an interview that the book's producers studied Hansard, newspaper stories, speeches and magazine interviews. "There are some interesting quotes in it," said Mr. Bonnycastle. "Some of them were taken out of context and perhaps they weren't fair but, on the whole, it really makes him look pretty good."

"We've sent him a dozen copies."

COVERS 1940 TO 1968

The book has entries from 1940 to February, 1968, under such chapter headings as Methods of thinking and methods of work; Serving the people; U.S. aggressors and all their running dogs; Dare to struggle and dare to win; The lackey organs of liberalism are paper tigers; All erroneous ideas, all ghosts and monsters must be subject to criticism; and Self-reliance and arduous struggle.

A French-language publishing house in Montreal published shortly before the June 25 federal election a 176-page, red-covered book in similar vein called Quotations of Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

"Everyone is against me but the people."

"I have these views and you've got to go back to see where they were formed. They are not always the right views perhaps, but they were formed in the pioneer tradition."

"Catch the vision. Catch the vision of the kind of Canada this can be. We ask you not to follow the path of defeatism and fear, not the concept of igloo to igloo. I've seen this vision: I've seen this picture of Canada."

"The gas companies contemplated an increase, but I spoke words that they understood and there has been no increase."

"You press people only know about 10 per cent of the real John Diefenbaker."

PLANS SET TO REBUILD HISTORIC CATHEDRAL

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP) — An international fund raising drive will be launched to find funds to reconstruct St. Boniface Basilica, destroyed by fire last month.

A spokesman for the building committee of the historic cathedral, said Wednesday the church would be rebuilt on the original site. The exterior is expected to be almost identical to the 60-year-old landmark.

The spokesman said the drive will attempt to raise $1,500,000 to supplement insurance money of about $1,000,000 to restore the cathedral. About $20,000 has been raised since the church burned down.

Reconstruction work, once started, is expected to take two years.

B.C. Hydro Cable Ends Will Get Protection

A cabinet order Wednesday authorized B.C. Hydro to expropriate 18 parcels of land at both ends of the Georgia Strait submarine cables which have been criticized because they go through the Roberts Bank port site.

The pieces of land, totalling 83.31 acres, lie in the Seminole district on Vancouver Island and the Comox District on the mainland.

The cabinet order said they are needed for the route which is being used in a submarine power cable project linking the Stratford substation near Duncan to the Arnott substation in Delta.

Last March, National Harbors

Chairman Howard Mann complained the route was "right smack in the middle" of the proposed superport development along the Delta municipality shoreline.

A.B.C. Hydro spokesman said discussions are still going between the province and the National Harbors Board.

He said it may become necessary to alter the route but so far no final decision has been made.

First stage of the multi-cable project to boost power supply to Vancouver Island by 156,000 kilowatts was completed last June and the final cable is expected to be in place next year.

While it is described as "unimaginable" that a minister would reject a council recommendation, the scientists argued that the proposed arrangements would violate the "essential" principle of a scientist's peers being the only ones equipped to make a final decision on the merit of a project.

Medical Council Shift Disturbs Scientists

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet decision to shift the Medical Research Council into the federal health department from a virtually autonomous position as an agent of Parliament is causing serious worry in the scientific community.

Negotiations still are going on about the position the council will occupy under the new setup but informants said Wednesday it appears that some council powers will be limited.

Health Minister Munro, questioned about the matter, said talks are going to clear up objections to the change but the final pattern has not been set.

"These objections are being taken seriously into account and, where practical, they will be met," he said.

He declined comment on three specific points raised in several quarters among scientific groups involved in the council's $27,400,000-a-year program to finance medical research projects.

THREE AREAS OF CONCERN

The three major areas of concern among the scientists appear to be:

—Will future heads of the council continue to report directly to a cabinet minister or become subordinate to the deputy health minister?

—Will the council and its advisory panels continue to be the sole authority over award of money granted by Parliament for medical research?

—Will the composition of the council and its assessment committee continue to be predominantly drawn from senior men in university and scientific institutions?

Informants say that the first question appears to have been settled. The council will report directly to the health minister.

Informants said the scientists appeared happy about this assurance.

However, the scientists were not enthusiastic about the initially-proposed arrangements for council control over research funds.

At present, Parliament votes funds to the National Research Council, earmarking a specific amount for the Medical Research Council.

In practice, after determining the merit of an application for research funds and the reasonableness of the amount, the medical council makes an award of the grant and names the recipient. The minutes of the medical council's meetings are attached to those of the NRC and the federal treasury officers make grant payments on the basis of the medical body's decision.

In transferring the medical council to the health department, it was proposed that the council's awards be made as recommendations to the health minister, thus giving the minister the final say over the awards program.

While it is described as "unimaginable" that a minister would reject a council recommendation, the scientists argued that the proposed arrangements would violate the "essential" principle of a scientist's peers being the only ones equipped to make a final decision on the merit of a project.

Arthur Mayse

Victoria planner Geoffrey J. Greenhalgh, quoted by Times City Hall Reporter Jim Hume in the first of an article series that merits thoughtful reading, suggests that it's up to the people to tell those who act for them what kind of an environment they wish.

Perhaps we should try Mr. Greenhalgh's pronouncement on for size.

What the typical family wants is first, a nice modern place in which to live. It should have schools not too far away; a well-stocked shopping centre within easy reach, and plenty of green space around it to provide elbow-room for growing children.

Take these ingredients of the good life, run them through a computer, along with such factors as expected population increase, and we would come up with not one but two solutions.

The first calls for an approximation, on Saanich Peninsula, of New York State's high-income Westchester County... obviously not the correct answer in an area of modest rather than spectacular average income.

The second brings us smack up against the high-rise circle with its main floor or basement shopping malls, and its parkland approximation of the old-time village green.

Is this the answer? Perhaps in part... but not for the families flooding into one of earth's two most favored sectors! (The other, I'm told, is the Kenya Highlands.)

Nope. What they want is precisely what they are getting, at the expense of the peninsula's steadily-dwindling farmlands. This is a house on a lot they can afford.

So here we are, all tied in a knot and back on the planners' doorstep looking for a way out of the dilemma.

This suggests to me that very much more than what we want is involved here. The issue narrows down to what we can realistically expect to have; and in this matter of mastering our environment, I think we should be getting less talk and more action from those we elect to govern us.

To date in Greater Victoria's post-war expansion, the chief planner has been the realtor. If you doubt this, go back to among the buckshot subdivisions.

We should be grabbing green-belts, and generous ones, from the realtor's path, because such ones represent the only portions of this peninsula that can possibly be retained in their verdant state.

As for the remainder, it is going to fill up, just as Vancouver-oriented bedroom suburbs have straggled out along the Fraser Valley.

But I don't feel this fact should give cause for a ringing of official hands. There are, after all, other areas within easy reach of Victoria.

If you are a recent arrival; it may have occurred to you that we are insular in these parts to a degree that taxes belief. We have this peninsula complex, and against all reason, we refuse to get out from under it.

From where I sit, I can look out to Sooke Hills that will one day be inhabited surely as North and West Vancouver have toiled street by street up their mountain slopes.

Go out to the Douglas Street centres any weekend and you will find Duncan families busy at their shopping. We consider Duncan and the Cowichan Valley outside our sphere because the Malahat comes between. But the people up there don't!

A city should be proud of its potential, not afraid of it.

I'm not sure that the leaders of a proud city should ask the residents what they'd like done, any more than a doctor would ask a patient to diagnose his ills and prescribe for them.

The point is that whatever we, or most of us, might want for the south Island may have very little bearing on what we get. It is for government and its experts to analyze, project, and tell us how we can best turn the fact of change to our advantage.

If they can do that, and if action follows, expanded population might prove to be more of boon than blight.

Pat Bay Widening In Fall

MLA Certain Work to Start

Saanich MLA John Tisdalle today forecast an autumn start on the widening of Patricia Bay Highway to four lanes.

Mr. Tisdalle said he could not reveal details of talks he has had with Highways Minister Wesley Black.

"But I am not living just on hope," said Mr. Tisdalle.

He said surveys are already under way for highway access roads all through the Saanich peninsula.

REROUTE TRAFFIC

"This will enable them to reroute traffic when they start work."

The MLA said he expects there "will be work in evidence on the road to the Victoria end this fall."

Negotiations with private landowners are now proceeding but it is not possible yet to outline the actual route where it deviates from the existing two-lane highway, said Mr. Tisdalle.

He said his confidential discussions with the minister have also covered the need for widening the Trans-Canada Highway to four lanes between Victoria and Goldstream and "right over the Malahat."

TOO MANY DEATHS*

Mr. Tisdalle said, "There are far too many deaths on both these highways." He thought those sections of the Trans-Canada where there are now three lanes — a centre lane for passing — are especially dangerous.

"And on the Pat Bay Highway, people must drive with their insurance policies in their pockets." He was grateful that many motorists now recognize the hazard caused by heavy traffic and they are driving "in a cagey manner."

NECESSARY IN 1967?

He said the traffic explosion is worse than the population explosion in the priority of problems facing this area.

"The widening of Patricia Bay Highway has been far too long on the drawing boards. I was disappointed that it wasn't done in 1962. It was necessary then."

"We allow these problems to almost become emergencies."

LOSS CONFIDENCE

Another factor is "the credibility gap." This means simply that "a lot of people have lost confidence in Johnson and the Democratic administration."

Finally, Dr. Presthus, he believes there is a sort of cyclical effect in American politics where many voters think the country should change parties occasionally.

"There's a time-for-a-change psychology right now."

One of the ironies of a Nixon win is that "I don't think he's going to do things any differently."

"Ever since Dien Bien Phu he has advocated an escalation of the Vietnam conflict and he is speaking similarly right now."

"And at home, with the Negroes in the cities, like many of the top-level Republicans he's a law-and-order man. By that, I think he believes we need firmer measures — riot control training, respect for property. Many people believe this is what brought the problem on."

Dr. Presthus classifies Nixon as a strong candidate, intelligent and articulate. And he thinks he will beat Hubert Humphrey, who he says has the Democratic presidential nomination sewn up.

The vice-president is suffering from an image which results from the practical realities of politics.

"Party loyalty is a major path to success in politics. In Johnson he's had a boss who demands about 150 per cent in loyalty and conformity."

"As a result, he's had to go around advocating policies that are really not his own... I doubt he really has his heart in the Vietnam policy."

Humphrey's problem now is to detach himself from Johnson and overcome the fairly widespread belief that he doesn't have any policy of his own.

Dr. Presthus doesn't think there's time to do the job before the election in November.

"We allow these problems to almost become emergencies."

By DON VIPOND

In 1945 some 20,000 automobiles travelled the streets of Greater Victoria.

By 1955 that total had increased to 67,000 vehicles, by 1965 to 137,000 and seven years from now, in 1975, the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Attorney-General's Department estimates that 100,000 vehicles will present Victorians with a nightmare rush-hour traffic problem.

So great has the problem become, not just in Victoria but in every Canadian city of major size, that in February, 1969, the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities has scheduled for Toronto the first full-scale transportation conference ever held in this country.

"It gave us the option as to where we could live and now by its tremendous volume it is taking that option away from us."

"The automobile makes it possible for people to live well away from the centre of the city, but to come downtown to shop, dine or go to the theatre.

"But so great are the demands of the automobile for parking space, so great are the pressures it brings that it is in danger of killing the downtown core of destroying the city it helped to build."

Mayor Curtis views the problem with equal alarm.

"It may surprise some people, but I have always recognized the fact that the centre of Victoria must stay vibrant, strong and attractive," he says.

"It is important to the entire region that downtown Victoria stays that way. We in Saanich regard it as our 'downtown' too, you know."

"Like Mayor Stephen I can see the day when we shall have to make it too expensive to take the family car downtown."

"Possibly we shall have to insist that the automobile be left at the city limits with some sort of mass transit moving in and out of the city centre."

"I don't think this area will ever be suited to the accepted forms of rapid transporta-

TRAINING IN GERMANY FOR FOUR

Two Victoria boys and two Nanaimo boys left today for a three-and-a-half month army training scheme in West Germany.

All are 18-year-old members of the Canadian Scottish militia.

They board military aircraft in Vancouver Friday for Petawawa, Ont., from where they fly directly overseas.

They are Cpl. R. J. D. Coates, 1460 Grant; Cpl. Kevin Bruce Taylor, 2219 Shakespeare; L. Cpl. Grant R. Decker and Pte. Allan S. Thomas, both of Nanaimo.

Firefighters Mopping-Up Area Blaze

Firefighters today are mopping up the 150-acre forest fire on the north shoulder of Mount Finlayson they brought under control late Wednesday, B.C. Forest Service reports.

The fire, which broke out Sunday night, is reported completely under guard. Firelines on the steep mountainside along Finlayson Arm, opposite Malahat Drive, are still manned by 165 men.

Two Canoe water bombers, a helicopter and seven bulldozers were used Wednesday in the battle.

Campfires are blamed for starting two fires overnight on Vancouver Island. Cause of the Mount Finlayson fire has not been determined.

URGENT APPEAL

The forest service has issued an urgent appeal for caution in the woods after six new fires, including two on the Island, were reported in the Vancouver forest district.

Officials warned that legal action would be taken against persons caught disobeying a ban on campfires in the district, which includes the lower mainland, the Island and the Gulf Islands.

Three of the new fires were blamed on smokers and one was caused by children playing with matches.

FACE $500 FINE

Offenders face a fine of up to $500 and can be held responsible for the cost of fighting fires they start, officials said.

Altogether 22 new fires were reported overnight in the province, bringing the total burning today to 143.

Fire hazard in the district is rated as high.

Ottawa Delays Move of Army

QORs to Remain At Work Point

The Queen's Own Rifles have been told they will be based at Work Point in Esquimalt for the "foreseeable future" in an apparent policy modification by the federal government.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said in January the historic Work Point Barracks were due to be "phased out" beginning possibly in a year but he left the timing vague.

Esquimalt Reeve Ray Bryant said today he will seek clarification of government policy in view of the apparent change in plans.

After the Cadieux phase-out statement — made in reply to a question at a Victoria press conference — Mr. Bryant went to Ottawa to press Esquimalt's case for the 130 acres of valuable property when it became available.

"There did appear to be a specific clearing-out date at that time," he said.

But he said that information was received prior to the June 25 federal election and a policy change may have been made since.

Esquimalt is currently negotiating with the defence department for the Macaulay Point portion of the Work Point base. The area involved is said to be about five acres but Mr. Bryant could not confirm the exact size.

The area is not regarded as vital to the Work Point base and there is wide interest in making it into a park.

Mr. Bryant said negotiations for the overall site are in a preliminary stage and a change or postponement of plans would not hurt Esquimalt.

News that the land was to become surplus touched off a wave of interest among private land developers in January and one realtor placed a $6,000,000 value on the site if it were zoned for high-rise apartments.

MINOR REBUILDING

Major Derek Bamford, second-in-command at the army base, said the Queen's Own Rifles are going ahead doing minor rebuilding and other repairs on the assumption they will be stationed at Work Point for some time.

"We've been told we'll be here for the foreseeable future," he said, adding that he didn't have any more precise idea of what that meant than anyone else.

"It's possible that in five years' time we won't be here," he said. "We're hopeful we'll be here for quite a while."

Loss of the Queen's Own regiment — recently boosted to a strength of 700 men by addition of 100 from Calgary — would be a serious economic blow to the Victoria area.

WON'T REPLACE JOBS

Proper development of the surplus land could be a shot in the arm for the area, but it would hardly produce enough jobs to cancel out the payroll losses and related losses in employment in the trade and service sectors of the economy here.

Mr. Bryant paid tribute to the contribution made by the Queen's Own Rifles and their families to the community life and said their continued residence here was a welcome prospect.

There is speculation a change in timetable for phasing out the Work Point centre may be related to the continuing need for Canada's role as an international peacekeeper.

Mr. Bryant said defence officials had co-operative in preliminary talks giving rise to hope that the municipality would be given serious consideration when the property became available.

Work Point was established as headquarters for army detachments in B.C. in 1887 when C Battery from Kingston arrived to take up residence. It had earlier housed an artillery battery.

The Queen's Own moved into Work Point in 1963, taking over from the Princess Pats.

Ask The Times

Q. What were the so-called Great Kitchen Debates? Who won—N.R.

A. The "Great Kitchen Debates" refers to a July, 1959 encounter between then Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and Richard M. Nixon, at that time U.S. Vice President. Nixon, on a tour of Russia, on July 23 took the Soviet Premier through an American exhibit in Moscow. There, against a setting of washing machines and modern kitchen displays, the two heatedly debated world affairs.

According to press accounts, Khrushchev lashed the two-hour debates, wagging his finger under Nixon's nose, boasting that Russia was the more powerful nation. He "flashed red" when Nixon replied that that was merely "an ultimatum" and "an irresponsible threat." Western assessments agree Nixon, calm, witty and smiling throughout, won the "barbed exchange."

In the next article the Times will take a close look at the bursting-at-the-seams city and present another as yet unanswered problem: what should the optimum size of a city be? And how can urban growth be controlled so that it does not completely destroy the Saanich Peninsula?

Anyone wishing a question answered or a specific query answered in the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.
